SPEECH AT THE COLISEUM

Bull Moose Candidate Governor Sets
Out Examples to Prove His Contention.

Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator and Bull Moose candidate for governor, devoted a good part of his two-hour speech at the Coliseum last night to an arraignment of the so-called bi-partisan boss system and invisible government and the Indianapolis News.

The candidate expressed appreciation for the number of old soldiers who appeared on the stage, and paid a tribute to Nate Weeks, now deceased, the Rush county candidate for the legislature two years ago with the aid of whose vote Mr. Beveridge expected to be returned to the senate. Rush county gave Mr. Weeks the normal Republican majority.

Mr. Beveridge referred to the veterans of the civil war all as Whigs or Democrats in their earlier days, but all patriots who found their party was not representing them. He likened the leaders in the formation of the Bull Moose party to Oliver P. Morton, who as a young Democratic lawyer left his party, and Abraham Lincoln, who deserted the Whig party to form the Republican party.

He said the little politicians, with orders from higher authorities, come to the voters and ask them to stand by the party of Jefferson and the party of Lincoln. He asserted the same plea was made to Lincoln and Morton in their day. "We tried to get the parties to obey the peoples' will," he continued, "and couldn't, so we formed a new party."

Mr. Beveridge defined the much-used term, "invisible government" as a partnership of wicked and mighty "interests" for the purpose of securing their unjust gain from the people, gain not only from their pockets but also at the expense of their health and life.

The candidate launched forth into an abusive denunciation of what he chose to call the bi-partisan boss "system," including the little politicians who get their orders from Indianapolis.

His first example of the fancied boss system was the opposition to the meat inspection bill, which Mr. Beveridge admitted he framed and Theodore Roosevelt forced through a reluctant congress.

Beveridge's second exhibit was the tobacco trust which he declared,

THAT BEVERIDGE CROWD.

Of course, the size of the crowd at the Beveridge meeting last night, is a much-mooted question, made so by the expected and usual exaggeration by the Indianapolis Star, a Bull Moose organ which is very biased in its opinions as regards politics. John M. Maxwell, the Star correspondent, who follows the Bull Moose gubernatorial candidate over Indiana, without any apology, stated in bold type that the crowd consisted of 2500 people. Of course, Rushville and Rush county people who have been attending the chautauqua in the Coliseum know that the largest crowd of which the assembly ever bragged of being seated in the inclosure was not quite equal to that. And last night the Coliseum was not full by any means, possibly two-thirds is a fair estimate. And the Star correspondent must have been off a thousand, anyway—and one thousand people are a good many. People came here from Connersville, Greensburg, Shelbyville and other surrounding cities. A special car was run from Morristown.

filched 140 million dollars from the government in seven years (No records other than his word were offered in evidence.)

Exhibit number three was the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. He declared he and Dolliver voted against the bill because it was written by "invisible government." He declared the duty on structural iron was raised from forty to a hundred and sixty per cent, according to cost by the Payne law. He said senators favoring certain schedules formed coalitions with other senators who favored other schedules being raised, and traded about in voting for each other's increase.

Mr. Beveridge charged that the candidate of the Republican party stole the nomination at Chicago. "I trust you get the meaning of that word 'stole'" he said. He declared the bulk of the Republican States of the North voted to seat the Roosevelt delegates from the thirteenth Indiana district. He alleged fraud was perpetrated in the primary in Indianapolis held to elect delegates to the Indiana convention. He did not state that the Republican national committee, on which were fifteen avowed Roosevelt men, voted unanimously to seat the Taft delegates from Indiana, thus proving beyond a doubt that there was no basis for the claim of fraud in the Indianapolis primaries.

"Now what do you think of that?" asked Beveridge in summing up. "How do we know?" shouted a man in the audience.

Beveridge pointed out that Wilson could control the bosses in his own party, and to prove there are bosses, Continued on Page 8.

COUNTY VOTE IS
FIXED AT 5,678Election Commissioners Get Estimates From Counties to Figure
Number of Ballots.

3,172 PRECINCTS IN THE STATE

Judging From Official Figure More
Votes Will be Cast Than in 1908.

The State board of election commissioners has completed its estimate of the total vote that will be cast in Indiana at the coming election by all parties and the issuance of the number of ballots to each county that is required by law will begin immediately. Figures, compiled by the force of assistant clerks, working under Ed D. Donnell, clerk of the board, show that the estimated vote in the State will be 788,353. In the 1908 presidential election, the board's estimated vote was 782,781. The total vote of the State, cast that year, according to the records of the secretary of State, was 721,126 for the presidential candidates.

The figures are the result of calls made on county clerks and auditors for estimates as to the total number of ballots needed in each precinct in the State. To the estimated totals of the county officials is added 25 per cent by the State board, making 986,016 this year. The board also adds two thousand ballots to the shipment to each county as a reserve package. Adding two thousand to each county's quota the total number of ballots that will be sent out this year is 1,170,016.

The State board sent out 1,163,498 ballots in 1908.

The total number of precincts in the State is 3,172. The county officials of Brown county have not yet returned their estimate to the election board and their estimates of eight years ago has been used by the board. In many counties the estimates are not accurate, it is believed.

The vote to be cast in Rush county November fifth is estimated at 5,678. The estimates of other counties in this district is: Fayette, 5,163; Franklin, 4,447; Hancock, 4,955; Henry, 8,012; Shelby, 8,422; Union, 2,200 and Wayne, 16,350.

AGED WOMAN DIES

at Her Home in Clarksburg
Sunday.

LIFE LONG RESIDENT THERE

Mrs. Sarah Linville, a well known and highly respected resident of Clarksburg, died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning after a lengthy illness of tuberculosis, says the Greensburg News. Her death had been expected for several months, for her condition was of a nature that showed the inevitable was near at hand.

Mrs. Linville was past seventy-eight years of age and was the widow of Jesse Linville, who passed away more than twenty years ago. She had been almost a life long resident of the Clarksburg community and was known and esteemed by many.

She is survived by five sons, three daughters and a number of grandchildren. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Presbyterian church in Clarksburg, of which the deceased was a member of many years standing.

HOPKINS SAYS
HE ISN'T GUILTYKentuckian is Arraigned on Grand
Jury Indictment For Shooting
Lee Somers Last June.

IS RELEASED ON $1000 BOND

Claude Levi Also Pleads Not Guilty
and Gives Court Recognizance—
Civil Cases.

William Hopkins, living north of Carthage, who shot Lee Somers Wednesday, June 12, after an argument over a line fence between their farms, was arrested late yesterday on an indictment returned by the grand jury which adjourned Friday. Hopkins was arraigned in court, pleaded not guilty and his bond was fixed at a thousand dollars. Court recognizance was furnished by W. H. Sharer of Carthage and he was released.

Hopkins has been at Liberty since the shooting. He was arrested a short time afterwards and was released on a hundred dollar bond furnished by the same man. At first Somers was thought to be fatally hurt and Hopkins escaped the sheriff and police and fled. He later returned and gave himself up to the authorities.

Claude Levi, charged with assault and battery with intent to kill, was arraigned late yesterday afternoon before Judge Blair and pleaded not guilty. He was released under $500 bond. The bond was reduced from $1000, and was furnished by his father, Cal Levi, and Ol. M. Dale. Levi was first arraigned in police court and while awaiting trial was indicted by the grand jury. Levi slashed Jake Williams with a knife a week ago Saturday night.

Thus far five of the nine indictments returned by the grand jury have been served, the other three being one against Roy Murphy, who, it is alleged, obtained money under false pretenses, and the two against Mrs. Minnie Montgomery for keeping a house of ill fame and contributing to delinquency. Both languish in jail because they are unable to furnish bond.

Several civil cases have been disposed of already this week. The divorce case of Effie Pearl Short against Orbie J. Short, in which five thousand dollars alimony was demanded, was dismissed and the costs paid.

The divorce suit of Cora B. Gard against James Gard for a thousand dollars alimony was sent to Franklin county on a change of venue, which was asked by the defendant. Ten days was allowed for the change to be perfected.

Trial finding and judgment for the plaintiff was returned by Judge Blair in the case of Building Association No. 10 against Walter Bartlett, Annie Bartlett and the Rush Land Company in the sum of $646.27, which includes attorneys' fees. The sum of $750 was demanded in addition to possession of real estate and the foreclosure of a mortgage.

In the case of James A. Root against himself as administrator of the estate of Sarah A. Root, deceased, on an account in which $400 was demanded, Judge Blair returned judgment in the sum of a hundred dollars.

In the partition suits of Eva Offutt and others against Paul R. Offutt and others, and George W. and J. M. Coon against Hickson H. Stevens and others, final reports have been filed and approved and the commissioners discharged.

Meeting.

W. T. Durbin, Republican candidate for governor, was busy in Terre Haute yesterday. At noon he went to the branch of the car works, from there to the traction barns and then to the court house where he talked to the county candidates. In the evening he was one of the speakers at a big meeting in the Knights of Columbus hall, where former Congressman James E. Watson was the principal speaker, and Felix Blankenbaker, candidate for congress also spoke.

SAME TAX LEVY
AS LAST YEARCouncil Passes Ordinance Fixing
Rate at One Dollar on Each
One Hundred Dollars.

TO READVERTISE FOR BIDS

Contracts For Ninth, George and Hannah Street Improvements
to be Let Oct. 8.

The city council met in special session last night to receive bids on the proposed improvements of George, Ninth and Hannah streets and incidentally passed the tax levy ordinance, the appropriation ordinance and transacted considerable business of minor importance.

George and Ninth streets are to be stone roadway and Hannah street is to have more cement sidewalks. The specifications for the improvements were not on file in time for the contractors and no bids were received. The council ordered the improvements readvertised and set October 8 as the time for awarding the contracts.

The tax levy ordinance and the appropriation ordinance were identical to the ones passed last year. The ordinance governing the tax levy calls for a levy of $1 on each $100. This is the same rate as has been in force for a number of years. The council appropriated approximately $60,000 for expenses during the year. The ordinance is exactly like the one passed a year ago.

Street Commissioner Kelley reported that the improvement of the Main street crossing of the C. H. & D. railway cost the city $173.55. This is below the estimated cost. The estimate of the city engineer called for an expenditure of $180. The crossing has been completed and is now in first class condition.

The directors of the horse show petitioned the council for the use of the streets and three policemen during the event. As the council has no power to grant the use of the streets this was turned down but with the understanding that the horse show take the streets anyway. The request for three extra policemen was granted.

The council adopted a scale of prices for electricity for power use. The rate is as follows: 1 to 500 kilowatts, .05; 500 to 1000 kilowatts, .04; 100 to 1500 kilowatts, .03; over 1500 kilowatts .02. The rate is the same as has been in force but was never adopted.

Few Things Beveridge
Carelessly Omitted

Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator and Bull Moose candidate for governor, omitted a number of important things in his speech at the Coliseum last night.

He did not mention county local option at any time. Since this is a vital question in this campaign in Indiana, he might have at least given it a few moments of his valuable time. He might have stated that when he had control of the Republican party machinery in Indiana two years ago that he choked a temperance plank out of the platform. He might have recalled that a few earnest farmers forced the plank in the Bull Moose platform against his wish.

Mr. Beveridge did not discuss anything that is vitally interesting to a farming community, such as Rush county is. He did not arraign the Harvester trust, which controls and keeps up the price of the farming implements which farmers buy, because that is counted a "good" trust by the Big Bull Moose, Theodore Roosevelt, and also because George W. Perkins, one of the organizers of the trust, is the "angel" of Roosevelt's campaign who underwrote Continued on Page 4.

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

BEVERIDGE'S SOPHISTRY.

Albert J. Beveridge, until recently a professed republican, for twelve years the representative of Indiana in the upper branch of the congress, chosen for the senatorial office by the Republican party of Indiana, now the candidate of the Progressive party for governor of Indiana, for many long years has been the personal friend of the editor of The Herald. In all those years we supported him in his political undertakings, in so far as they concerned the operations of the Republican party. We are trying hard even at this time not to fall out with him and to give him credit for sincerity of purpose, even though his judgment is sadly in error. It is his privilege to change his political affiliations. We are not complaining of that. It is his right to leave the Republican party and join the third party, if he feels that way. The Republican party signally honored him, and he undoubtedly owed it a certain fealty. Perhaps he considers the debt cancelled. Maybe it is, from his point of view. That is neither here nor there. He is within his rights as a free American citizen in leaving it. But is manner of embracing his new gods certainly tries one's patience sorely. For instance he said in one of his speeches the other day.

"The nation's wealth is great, but it is in the hands of the few who stole it. Because you do not wear purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day is not your fault, but of those who have despoiled you. You are as much entitled as any one to automobiles, and yachts, and palaces by the sea, and retinues of servants, and assuredly these blessings would be yours if you had your dues. These good things belong to you and if our party is successful we shall despoil the Egyptians who have despoiled you and you will come into your own."

Read without other knowledge of the author than the sentiment conveyed by the paragraph we have quoted, one might with reasonable safety ascribe these words to Eugene Debs or Anna Goldman, rather than to the man who held the dignified office of senator of the United States from the sovereign state of Indiana. A few years ago such a proclamation from the arch-socialist Debs would have been met by the senator from Indiana of whom we speak with a justifiable outburst of eloquent and indignant protest, if indeed he had deemed it worthy of his notice.

Sometimes we are almost tempted to believe that a few of the leaders of the new party have eaten of the root that stupifies the perceptions, else they would not, with startling suddenness, go plump, heels over head, into the noisome and miasmatic swamps of socialism. The very essence of socialism is the breeding of a sentiment which arrays the classes against one another, and inculcates malice and hatred. If Mr. Beveridge's words do not belong with the declamation of the diseased imaginings of the socialists then we do not understand the meaning of words.

No one knows better than Mr. Beveridge that everybody can not, in the nature of things, have automobiles and palaces and retinues of servants. His specious declarations and sophistic and untenable predictions and promises are entirely discreditable to a man of intelligence, education, refinement and knowledge or irrevocable natural laws.

SOME MORE STANDARD OIL CORRESPONDENCE

Joe Sibley Had a Friendly Tip for Archbold.

New York, Sept. 24.—Hearst's Magazine for October, under the heading "More Standard Oil Letters," gives further evidence of the efficacy of Standard Oil cash in purchasing legislation. Here is a sample:

House of Representatives, Washington, Wednesday, Jan. 6, 1904. My Dear Archbold: Your telegram received. Sorry you cannot run over for a day. Think it most important for you to know the situation. The president was delighted to know that he had been misled as to the attitude of the S. O. Co., or rather "delighted" to know that the report was untrue. I think you can put in a very profitable hour over here. I know who told him, but I cannot repeat it.

I asked you and Mr. Rogers a question at the lunch table yesterday that, if you chance to remember it, may afford a clue. I much prefer that you learn the situation from the president's own lips and not from me. He urged strongly that you come over and meet him and said he wanted you at luncheon, where he could have a quiet talk with you. I cannot solve the motives of the ones who put him on the wrong track, but he was there and told me the story so far as I would let him do so; I finally said, "Please do not tell me, but if Mr. Archbold comes over you tell him."

In official life the invitation of the president is regarded in the nature of a command, and our friend probably construes it so, as strongly as anyone. Should you wish to meet him, or wish not to do so, please tell me, and I will make excuse or arrangements, as you indicate.

If you cannot run over this week, can you come next? You will get a first-class reception, and will have a great surprise. I shall keep track of matters here and will advise you of any matters of general interest. The puzzle, however, is no longer a Washington but a New York one, and the New York situation is Greek to me.

Please command me in any way, and believe me, sincerely yours,

JOS. C. SIBLEY.

In another letter to Archbold, dated Washington, Nov. 23, 1903, and marked confidential, Sibley says in part: "My Dear Mr. A.—A Rep. U. S. senator came to me today to make a loan of $1,000. I told him I did not have it, but would try and get it for him, and would let him know in a day or two. Do you want to make the investment? He is one who will do anything in the world that is right for his friends, if ever needed. Please telegraph me yes or no."

WHERE DO BULL MOOSE STAND?

Strength of New Party in Maryland Can Not be Determined Until After Election.

STRANGE REGISTRATION LAW

In Class With Socialists And Prohibitionists Until Ten Per Cent of Vote Polled.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 24.—There will be a new general registration in this city this fall, the first setting being today, with others tomorrow, October 1, 2, 8, 9, and 12. There is one day for revision only, October 15.

In the counties there will not be a new registration until 1914, but the law passed at the last session of the legislature provided for the transcribing of all names in new books and hereafter all voters must affiliate. They were obliged to do this before they could vote in the recent primary, but as only comparatively few participated the bulk of the voters have not declared. As there will not be another primary until the fall of 1913, when candidates for the legislature and local candidates are to be nominated, the voters not yet affiliated may declare their party allegiance either when the lists are revised on October 1, 8 and 15 or when they register in 1913.

In other words the law which applied until recently only to Baltimore city now applies to the entire state. Of course only Republicans and Democrats are recognized. Followers of the Bull Moose are in a class with the Prohibitionists and Socialists until they have polled 10 per cent. of the entire vote cast in the state. The strength of the new party cannot be determined until after the next regular election, which takes place in 1913. It matters not how many votes the Bull Moose candidates may poll this fall, their party can have no standing until after the state election.

If the followers of Roosevelt are sincere they must cut loose from the Republican party. In such an event they will be unable to affiliate and must go into the "declined" column.

Some Health Rules To Prevent White Plague

The Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has just issued a one-syllable compilation of Rules for Health. Primarily, the rules are to be used in connection with a campaign against the White Plague, but they cover simple precautionary measures against all diseases. The list will shortly be printed on cards and distributed through tenement districts.

The "Health Rules" are as follows:

Good Air—Avoid badly ventilated, badly lighted, dusty, dirty, overheated or damp rooms.

Avoid House Dust—Breathing dust, notably house dust, often causes disease. Have no tacked-down carpets and matting. Have loose pieces or rugs, and clean them frequently outdoors. Use a hair broom for your floors and keep lower sashes closed while sweeping or dusting. Open upper sashes, if possible. Never sweep rooms with a broom that raises dust.

Pure Water—Drink pure water. Avoid water from shallow and unprotected wells, and from ponds and streams. If in doubt, boil the water. Avoid public drinking cups.

Safe Milk—Tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and other diseases are often caused by drinking raw milk and raw cream. Get milk properly pasteurized, or home pasteurize it, or simply scald it. All cream, including that used for ice creams and butter, should be properly pasteurized to be safe.

Keep Clean—Take a bath or sponge daily, and a warm bath, followed by a cold splash, plunge, or shower, once or twice a week or oftener. Use soap freely. Wash your hands before handling food. Don't put fingers, money, paper, or pencil in your mouth. Don't bite your fingernails. Clean your teeth morning and evening.

Food—Don't eat raw food that was exposed to flies or dust, or touched by unclean hands. Fruits or vegetables so exposed should first be rinsed or washed thoroughly. Chew your food well.

Sleep—Get enough sleep. Sleep with windows open, or better still outdoors.

Head Up—Sit and stand erect. Breathe through your nose.

Exercise—Take plenty of outdoor exercise, but avoid excess in athletics; it may cause heart trouble. Don't eat or drink when overheated by exercise.

Liquor and Tobacco—Avoid liquor and tobacco. They are especially injurious to the young.

Don't Neglect Colds—Don't neglect coughs or colds. If you do not get well soon, go to a doctor or dispensary for treatment. Never cough, sneeze, or breathe into another's face. Don't spit on floors and sidewalks.

FEELS NEED OF SECOND PANEL

Government Preparing Carefully for Dynamite Trial.

HUNDRED NAMES NOW DRAWN

That Many of the Men Named in the First Panel of Jurymen in the Important Cases to Be Heard at Indianapolis Will Be Barred, Seems So Well Assured That a Second List of Fifty Has Been Named.

Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—That the choosing of a jury for the dynamite conspiracy cases pending in the federal court, which will start Oct. 1, will consume much time and that many of the men named in the first panel of jurymen will not prove satisfactory to the attorneys of both sides, seems to be assured. So sure of this are those closely connected with the trial that a second panel has been drawn to be used after the first panel, chosen a month ago, is exhausted.

The second panel, as did the first, includes fifty men. Those whose names were drawn live in different parts of the state, and will be notified by the United States marshal.

Secret preparations for the trial have been going on for months. Just how many witnesses have been subpoenaed, many guesses have been made, but no official announcement has been given to the public. However, it was unofficially stated at the office of United States Attorney Miller that the list of witnesses might reach 600. Who these are is being kept secret until the time of the trial.

W. N. Harding, who has charge of the defense of the fifty-one indicted men who will be tried for conspiracy in the dynamite plot, and other attorneys who are assisting him, are giving their undivided attention to the case. The defendants will begin coming to Indianapolis this week for interviews with their attorneys. Mr. Harding acknowledged that all would be in Indianapolis two days before the starting of the trial, Oct. 1. Further than to say the defense would be ready when the trial opens, Oct. 1, Mr. Harding would make no statement.

DECLARES INNOCENCE

Mrs. Epps Says Deathbed Confession Clears Her Name.

Huntington, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Charlotte Epps, who served twenty-three years for the murder of her husband, John Epps, plans to bring legal action to clear her name and to seek damages from the state for false arrest and imprisonment. The action is based on the alleged deathbed confession of Ed Meis, half brother of Epps, who, according to the woman, gave Epps poison.

Mrs. Epps was convicted and sent to prison in 1883. In 1905 she was released on parole. Her conviction was on circumstantial evidence only, and she has always stoutly maintained her innocence. With the confession of Meis, of which she says she has proof, she plans to reopen the case.

Meis lived with Mr. and Mrs. Epps. He endeavored to obtain some of Epps's property. Epps died suddenly and mysteriously, and his viscera showed traces of poison. Mrs. Epps was convicted on the theory that she had tried to get control of her husband's property.

Woman Gave the Alarm.

Anderson, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mont Justice, aged twenty-six, on parole from the reformatory for the theft of a laprobe, was captured by the police while he was in the act of robbing William Rank's grocery. Justice broke the glass in the door. A woman living opposite the store heard the crash and saw a man crawling through the door. The woman telephoned to police headquarters and the police surrounded the store and arrested Justice.

Double Tragedy at Clinton.

Clinton, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mrs. J. L. Church, divorced wife of Grover Jackson, a miner, was shot and killed by Jackson. He then blew out his own brains. The tragedy occurred at the Church home. Mrs. Church obtained a divorce about a month ago and married J. L. Church, a liveryman, who was absent at the time of the shooting. Mrs. Church was twenty-two years old.

Shortage of Laborers.

Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—"We could use 500 men today if we could find them," said Oswald Stahn, clerk in the state's free employment bureau at the statehouse. "Incessant calls for factory and railroad laborers are reaching the office every hour and there apparently are no men for the jobs that are waiting for them."

Thief Made Rich Haul.

Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 24.—A robber made a rich haul at the office of the Lafayette Artificial Ice company when he worked the combination of the safe and obtained $1,200 in cash and $500 in checks.

Suicide of a Farmer.

Lebanon, Ind., Sept. 24.—James W. Nicely, a farmer of Jackson township, this county, swallowed two ounces of carbolic acid and died in a half hour after taking the acid.

KENTUCKY COMING TO FRONT

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

New York, Sept. 24.—Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican National Committee, informed his workers today that he wanted them to substitute the word "brilliant" for bright when speaking of the President's prospects for re-election. "Taft sentiment is going ahead in leaps and bounds," said Hilles. "Henchmen inform me that the Ohio situation is rapidly taking shape, and that Mr. Taft is becoming especially strong here. This information merely corroborated a large number of similar reports coming to my office, all of which are to the effect that Ohio does not need a third party, does not want a third party, and will not take a third party. They another Republican President and will cast their votes for Mr. Taft."

"I am informed that Kentucky is another state which is rapidly coming into the Republican column. There are some very good reasons why this is so. The deciding factor in most of the Kentucky elections is the negro vote. The Kentucky negroes were greatly embittered against Col. Roosevelt because of his attempt to disfranchise the Southern negro while seeking to gain their support in the North by pretending to think they were more capable of casting an honest vote."

WILSON'S ENEMY IN RACE

James Smith After Senatorial Nomination in New Jersey.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 24.—The feeling is intense in both parties in this state today over the primary elections which will decide upon a man for United States Senator. United States Senator F. O. Briggs, Republican, is fighting for the nomination over several other candidates. On the Democratic side United States Senator James Smith's nomination has been the bone of bitter contention between Governor Wilson and the Smith followers. If Smith wins, it is said he will give fight for the defeat of Wilson on the National ticket.

COLORED EDUCATORS GATHER.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

Washington, Sept. 24.—Negroes prominent in educational circles from all parts of the country are here for the national congress of colored educators in connection with the national jubilee in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, which opened here today.

GOPHER REPUBLICANS MEET.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

Detroit, Sept. 24.—Following close upon the county convention, the Michigan Republican Convention met here today. John Baird, of Saginaw, wants the temporary chairmanship to go to Victor Gore, of Benton Harbor. There may be a contest over the temporary chairman, however. The contest in this state this year will probably be over the governorship, as it is generally conceded the presidential candidate to be given the big vote is William H. Taft.

WILSON TO SPEAK.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson is expected to be one of the distinguished guests at the annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which began here today. Representative Joseph E. Randall is president of the congress, which has been commended by the government for its great work. An interstate levee convention is being held in connection on with the rivers and harbors meeting.

Tariff Commissions.

The Democratic Congress which recently adjourned, contemptuously dismissed the non-partisan tariff board which at the instance of President Taft, had been making exhaustive and scientific investigation into tariff problems. Valuable information which the board had gathered was thrown away by the Democrats, who proceeded to draft their tariff bills in the secrecy of the committee room.

In abolishing the tariff board, the Democrats had the aid of some of those who are now loud in support of the Third-term Party. The leader and standardbearer of that party, in his speeches and in a recent article in his magazine, likewise has treated the board with contempt. However, he urges the establishment of a new sort of a tariff commission.

In accordance with the habit of his mind, he turns to Germany for his ideal of such a commission. It is a curious fact that, though always asserting his belief in the ability of the people to rule, he invariably selects a rigid bureaucratic model whenever proposing new governmental machinery for this republic.

While the Democrats and the Third termers are condemning, more by silence than by direct attack, the American tariff commission, it is interesting to observe that from Europe come words of appreciation. Thus, in discussing the American tariff board's report on wool, an official of the Royal Imperial Ministry of Commerce of Austria, regarded as the leading European authority on the tariff question said:

"It is an excellent standard work. The tariff board has come within a very short time to the head of all the similar boards established a long time since in other countries. It is really true that no legislative body has ever had presented to it a better report on the tariff question. It will be also entirely impossible not to take your results in mind in proceeding to a revision of the tariff. It would be a great mistake to stop the work of the board, and it would soon prove necessary to re-establish it."

So while we have the Third-termers urging the adoption of a European system of tariff commission for the United States, the European authority on the subject is holding up our commission, which the Democrats and Third-termers destroyed, as a model for the world.

The incident illustrates the evil worked to the cause of good government in the United States by partisan and factional jealousy and selfishness.

Absalom and Politics.

Colonel Roosevelt has a good deal to say about Armageddon, but he does not mention the story of Absalom. That narrative shows that Roosevelt had his counterpart centuries ago.

Absalom organized a conspiracy against his father, David. He went to work in Roosevelt fashion. For forty years he sat at the gate and met the men who came up to the city seeking the judgment of the king upon their controversies. Absalom greeted every man cordially and then according to the story in the fifteenth chapter of Samuel, the following occurred:

"And Absalom said unto him, See, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

"Absalom said, moreover, O that I were a judge in the land, that any man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me and I would do him justice."

By thus offering all things to all men, Absalom became very popular. He was the original demagogue. He finally secured a following large enough to start his rebellion, but he never had a chance to redeem his promise. In the first place, his army was defeated and, in the second place, he was killed and his body was thrown into a pit.

The modern Absalom travels over the country and insists that if he were only president the welfare of every individual would be his personal care. Many people believe in him, just as people believed in Absalom, but the rebellion which he has organized will, like Absalom's, go down into history as a defeated cause.

Roosevelt's Approval.

Although reciprocity is now a dead issue, farmers and others who are opposed to President Taft because he endorsed reciprocity should remember that President Taft did not take action until his course had received the full approval of Mr. Roosevelt.

"It is greatly to your credit to make the effort," wrote Mr. Roosevelt to President Taft on January 12, 1911, and in a speech at Grand Rapids, Mich., a month later he expressed to the people of Michigan his pleasure, because, as he thought, reciprocity with Canada would soon be an accomplished fact. A day or two afterwards he commended the members of the Republican club of New York city for the manner in which they were upholding the hands of President Taft in his efforts to secure reciprocity with Canada. Mr. Roosevelt was an earnest friend of reciprocity, and shifted only when he found that the scheme was unpopular.

More than this, he said in his letter to President Taft, "I firmly believe in free trade with Canada." This went far beyond President Taft's proposition.

It is worth while to remember also that if the Democrats should come into power Canada would obtain reciprocity which would give everything from that country, and from which the United States would get nothing in return.

Harmony in the Democratic party is exemplified by the acrobatic activities of the governor of New Jersey in avoiding being photographed with the governor of New York—and some of his supporters.

"We don't have to have very much brains to read statistics, and statistics are open to every man," remarks Candidate Wilson. Curious that he hasn't read any on the tariff question.

Down in Jersey they say that few offices have been mentioned in the presence of Woodrow Wilson in late years without his speculating with a suspicious degree of interest about their probable economic importance.

Labor was never so well paid as today, and the farmer was never so well rewarded for the product of his toil as today.

Falls Victim to
The Poetic Muse

Miss Laverne Conway of this city has fallen a victim to the alluring heroes and heroines of motion pictures, and she has given vent to her feelings with verse. It is acceptable verse, too, as is evidenced by the fact that the Motion Picture Story magazine thinks enough of it to give it space. The following poem is printed in the current number of the magazine, with the following comment over it:

Good for you Laverne; the more artists you admire, the more you'll enjoy your evenings at the photoplay. It's tiresome waiting for the "only onliest" favorites to promise to appear—and then not to, night after night:

There's two fair maids that I've watched ever so long,
Tho I seldom see them here in song.
But, in my opinion, well they've fared—
These two little maids, Ormi Hawley and Leah Baird.

Sometimes, when I go to a picture show,
And see Leah play with Maurice Costello,
I say to myself, she's sure a queen,
And my pulses beat wildly when they are flashed on the screen.

Ormi, little girl, how I love to see you play,
Especially if it's with John Halliday.
You two together, it's a treat to see;
My praises for you will last till eternity.

I love Alice Joyce, Harry Meyers, and a great many more,
And there's lots and lots whom I simply adore.
But to sum it all up, the ones I like best
Are Leah and Ormi, out of all the rest.
—Laverne Conway.

BEVERIDGE'S OMISSIONS

more than a hundred thousand dollars to finance his race for the Republican nomination. The Harvester trust has been sued by the Taft administration.

The Bull Moose candidate did not discuss the high cost of living, as his chief has. He did not promise to reduce that. It would be attacking the vitals of a farming community. It is the farm products that are so enormously high and he farmers are getting the returns.

Mr. Beveridge had nothing to say about the prices farmers are receiving for the stock and crops. He did not recall that during the period of depression under Democratic regime, prices fell off because mills were closed, money was scarce and there was no market for their commodity. Mr. Beveridge did not say that the present prosperity is due to the protective policy of the Republican party. Rush county people are not so much concerned about what happens over in Massachusetts or out in California as they are with what takes place here in Rush county.

Beveridge spoke of the little politicians who takes his orders from Indianapolis, referring to the two old parties. He, of course, omitted any mention of Boss Ed Lee's orders out of Indianapolis. He failed to call the attention of the crowd to the fact that Boss Lee had ordered a county ticket put out in every county to be in keeping with the "rule-or-ruin" policy of the Bull Moose party.

The candidate referred to the perfidy of the boss system. He neglected to recall the campaign of 1910 when he was one and only boss in the Republican party in Indiana. He ran everything according to his own discretion. He said Ed Lee would make a good henchman for State chairman. Due to an oversight, doubtless, he did not mention that every candidate for office on the Republican party two years ago had to take an oath of allegiance to the grand I Am Albert Jeremiah. We printed a case a few days since in which a candidate for supervisor—this little minor office—was called upon to swear his fidelity to the State boss, Mr. Beveridge. Yet this system is all very bad now. It has required all these years to get this soaked through Albert's cranium.

Mr. Beveridge observed facetiously last night that old line politicians say we have more prosperity than ever before and that there is no use of passing it around, with the added comment that he used to indulge in that himself before he knew better. A poor testimonial of his intelligence, don't you think, that it required the dozen or more years he has been in public life to be enlightened? He had to wait until Roosevelt was defeated for a third term nomination which he would have taken from the convention with delegates whose seats would have been very much in doubt, according to the vote of his own national committeemen, before he came to the sudden realization that the Republican party was wholly bad and contained no element of good.

At the outset the Bull Moose candidate announced he wished people to ask him questions to clear up his misconstrued statements, but he made a demand that the question be on the subject under discussion. This would, if followed, would do away with any questions concerning the activity of Boss Bill Flynn, George Perkins, Frank Munsey, a trust magnate and numerous other powers in high finance who are supporting the Bull Moose candidate.

Mr. Beveridge was always renowned for his modesty. His reputation in this regard extends to the far corners of the nation. In so many words last night, after he had assumed a humble main, he asserted that he wrote the meat inspection bill and T. R. forced it through congress. Hurrah for us! We were always under the impression that this is a representative government in which the people's representatives do the law making, and not a one-man affair. Or perhaps we should add a two-man affair and not leave out Jeremiah.

Beveridge did not spend much time on the Republican convention. He could not without letting the audience know some of the facts. He mentioned, of course, the two Indiana contests. He told of the alleged illegal voting in the Indianapolis primary. He did not say that the allegation was only in one ward, and that the impeaching witness before the national committee and the credentials committee admitted he could not claim fraud enough to change the result in the ward. Albert did not recall that the Taft Indiana delegates-at-large were seated by a unanimous vote, which included those of fifteen Roosevelt members of the committee.

Beveridge's own perfidy was revealed in declaring with megalomaniacal countenances that he always made it a rule of his life never to be bitter, but that he could not refrain from it when he thought of the bosses in the Republican party. We could not but think there was a bit of spite in that remark. He had been assailing the great bi-partisan bosses all evening. But, when he assumed that confidential air with the audience he must confess to this dead unsuspecting public down here that the Republican bosses really were the worst to be truthful about it. The bosses with which he has been associated for more than twelve years and which he did not discover until Roosevelt couldn't get a nomination from the Republican party.

Beveridge's modest admissions were so common that we almost overlooked one. He acted like he really thought so when he said that they all had a lot of trouble getting along with him when he was in the senate.

Beveridge saw fit to say that every "bad" trust was against the Bull Moose party. The steel trust and the Harvester trust, you may remember, have been given the stamp of approval by Mr. Roosevelt, Beveridge's chieftain. He said the oil trust was supporting Taft and the tobacco trust, Wilson, but kindly and graciously omitted the names of the trusts back of the Bull Moose party.

Beveridge discussed the minimum wage scale for women and described some of the conditions under which women work. Out of pure negligence and oversight, he did not mention that he found these facts from a report of a special commission which investigated the Harvester trust binder twine factory where women the report said, were working twelve hours a day under very unsanitary conditions and for wages that would hardly keep body and soul together.

SPICELAND BOY UP FOR FORGERY

Omer Lloyd, Son of Robert Lloyd, is Arrested in Osborne, Ohio.

IS TAKEN BACK TO NEWCASTLE

It is Charged he Forged His Father's Note to a Note For Sum of $151.

Omer Lloyd, a former automobile workman and formerly employed at the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet factory, was brought to this city Sunday and turned over to local officers by Sheriff W. B. McCandish of Green county, Ohio, under arrest on the charge of forgery, says the Newcastle Courier. He was arrested by the Ohio sheriff at Osborne, Ohio, a small town near Xenia, Saturday night.

Lloyd, whose father, Robert Lloyd, resides in Spiceland, has been wanted by the local authorities for some time. It is charged that he forged his father's name to a note for $151 given to Ernest Milikan of near Spiceland, in payment for a horse. The father was sued on the note and the forgery was detected when he pleaded in his answer to the complaint in the suit that he had not signed the promissory document.

Lloyd was run down by clever work on the part of H. H. Evans, prosecuting attorney. The accused forger was formerly a member of the Newcastle company of the national guard. After he had fled from arrest he wrote to Capt. W. R. Myers of the guard for his discharge. He asked that the papers be sent to Osborne, Ohio.

The letter was found in a waste basket by Prosecuting Attorney Evans and he at once had a warrant issued for the arrest of Lloyd. The warrant was sent to Sheriff McCandish at Xenia and that official immediately began watching for Lloyd.

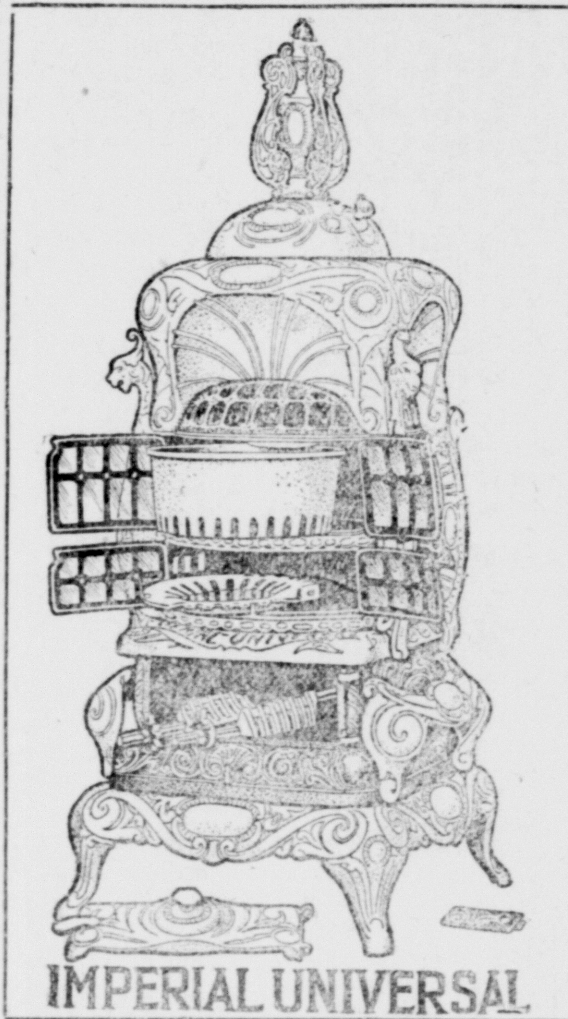

Saturday night Lloyd appeared at the postoffice at Osborne and inquired for his mail. As he was given the letter that was in the postoffice box he had rented he was arrested by the sheriff. Lloyd put up a stiff fight, but he was finally overpowered and handcuffed.

KEEPS CROWD WAITING

Beveridge Arrives Late and Other Speakers Fill In.

Albert J. Beveridge was an hour late in arriving at the Bull Moose meeting in the Coliseum last night, and the time intervening after the crowd gathered was given over to the candidate for joint senator from Fayette, Rush and Hancock counties, who made a short plea for votes. Gurlief Gensen of Shelbyville, who was yesterday nominated for Sixth district congressman at Connorsville, made a short speech in which he reiterated that the Bull Moose platform embraces all reforms, and is built around the home so that it will protect boys and girls from evil.

The young women of the Plum Creek Christian church will hold an exchange in John B. Morris' hardware store next Saturday. The proceeds will go toward a new piano.

No one who has heard Mrs. May W. Donnan lecture needs to be urged to attend the new course which will begin October 5, at half-past two in the Graham school building.

The special subject this year is Shakespeare. Several seasons ago Mrs. Donnan gave some notable lectures in Rushville on the historical plays of Shakespeare. Since that time there have been many requests for a series which would include the comedies and tragedies; her lectures this year will not be a repetition of what was given then, though some of the English historical plays will be used. Mrs. Donnan has studied Shakespeare with some of the best professors in this country and in England and she not only has knowledge but a way of her own in telling what she knows that never fails to please. Her method is an easy conversational manner and her intensely interesting appreciation heightens every claim and deepens every truth. As usual Mrs. Donnan will give some time at each lecture to new books, essays, novels, poems. This is an invaluable feature to the busy woman who would like to keep in touch with the best that is being done and said in the literary world but who has little time for reading.

Mrs. Donnan's continual plea for what is best for the use of books in a profitable and inspirational way is so effectively made that her lectures are in the highest degree educational and constructive and are to be judged, not by themselves, but by their total effect and service.

RUSHVILLE MAN GETS INTO POLITICS

John Garr is Worsted in Fistic Encounter at Shelbyville After Argument.

RELEGATED TO THIRD PLACE

A political discussion in the Williams saloon Saturday afternoon warmed up rather too much and after they had talked over the situation now existing politically and had discussed the merits of the respective favorite candidates until they had aroused themselves to the fighting pitch, John Garr of Rushville, Harry Taylor, better known as "Tader," and Jerry Worland, the last two named of this city, engaged themselves in a lively fistic encounter as a final means of settling their argument, says the Shelbyville News.

As soon as this mode was adopted Garr soon lost out of the argument completely. Taylor and Worland soon proving that they had been right in their contentions and giving Garr the third place.

Patrolman George Tolen placed Taylor under arrest and immediately took him before Justice Pryor, where he pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery and was assessed a fine and costs of ten dollars and thirty-five cents, which he did not have the ready cash to pay and was taken to jail to spend eleven days as the guest of Sheriff Terry.

Horace Hazeltine

(Copyright, 1912, A. C. McClung & Co.)
I stared at the speaker for an instant in absolute dumb amazement.

"I don't know why you say that," I said, at length, more hurt than angered. "I told you that from the moment I last spoke to him, seated beside him there on the after-deck, until I turned from the rail and found him gone, not more than two minutes elapsed. And that was God's truth."

"You said you were listening for what you thought sounded like a motor boat, didn't you?"

"I did."

"And you were leaning over the taffrail, looking for it, weren't you?"

"I was."

"But you didn't see it?"

"No, I didn't see it; and I couldn't hear it after the first few seconds."

The captain had fixed a gaze on me that seemed aimed to penetrate to my soul's fiber. After my answer he was silent a moment. Then he said:

"Where were you, Mr. Clyde, when that boat—motor, tug, or whatever she was—crossed within ten feet of the dory we are towing?"

Had he struck me in the face I could not have been more dumfounded.

"What do you mean?" were the only words that came to me.

"I mean that the craft you have been talking about came up and went astern of us, ten or twelve minutes before you gave the alarm that Mr. Cameron had vanished under your eyes. I was on the bridge and saw it myself—just a black shape, without lights, and her exhaust muffled, just as you say. You tell me that you and Mr. Cameron had been sitting there for three hours, at least; that you heard seven bells strike; that it was not more than fifteen or twenty minutes after this that you got up and went to the rail, and that you only stood there two minutes."

"I told you all of that, and every word is the truth," I insisted, vehemently.

"And yet," he retorted accusingly, "and yet—eight bells had struck before you gave the alarm."

I had not thought of the time. In my panic it had not occurred to me, of course to ascertain the hour and minute. But Captain MacLeod knew. At sea they work by clock. At eight bells the watch had changed.

"My dear fellow," I exclaimed rising, "you certainly cannot for a moment suspect me of complicity."

He stood up, too; imperturbable.

"I just want those things explained, that's all," was his reply.

"And I can't explain them," I told him, candidly. "You say you saw the boat. I didn't. You say it was after midnight when I came to you. It may have been. I don't know. It may have been nearer twelve, when I went to the rail. My impression is that it was not. I'll admit it is mysterious. The whole awful thing is mysterious."

My candor seemed to relieve him.

"Well, Mr. Clyde," he said, with equal sincerity, "maybe I was outspoken, but I wanted to know what you'd say to the points that were puzzling me."

"You did perfectly right," I told him. "As you have said, there must be no secrets between us." And then.

SERIOUS ERROR IN RUSHVILLE

Rushville Citizens Will do Well to Profit by the Following.

Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Rushville, there are many residents making the same serious error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork, or worry, perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Rushville resident's experience.

Mrs. William Merrill, 332 W. Fourth street, Rushville, Ind., says: "I suffered for quite awhile from weakness in my back. I had a dull pain over my kidneys, often accompanied by headaches. The simplest of my household duties was a burden. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson's Drug Store and used them. They proved their merits by entirely relieving me."

As I resumed my seat, I asked: "What about the fisherman? He hasn't evaded his guard, has he?"

MacLeod sat down again too.

"He's in where I put him, now," he answered with a shade of reluctance, "but—I'm not sure; it's almost as mysterious as the other—but I could have sworn I saw him come up that forward hatchway and go sneaking aft while I was on the bridge."

"When was that?" I pressed, eagerly.

"About a quarter of twelve."

"What did you do?"

"Nothing, just then. I waited. And while I was waiting I saw that black, spooky craft come out of the dark, and go skimming astern of us. A little after eight bells I came down from the bridge—I stopped there for just a minute to have a word with Brandon when he came up—and then I went myself to look after Johnson and the man I'd set to watch him. The fisherman was in a bunk sound asleep, and the man swore he had been lying there snoring, for the past two hours."

"Who was it came up the ladder twenty minutes ago?" I asked. He looked at me as if he thought I was gone suddenly loony. "Before the watch changed?" he asked. I nodded. "Not a soul came or went," he said, "since I been here."

"And the boat without lights?" I questioned. "Did you inquire about her? Who else saw her?"

"I asked the lookouts; but—well, no, sir—and that's very strange to me—neither of them saw her. I gave them both a rating. If they weren't asleep I don't see how they could have missed her."

The thing was growing more and more baffling. MacLeod was the last man to be accused of imaginative fancies. He was thoroughly in earnest in what he had told me; and yet for neither of his statements had he the smallest corroboration. For my own part I was sure that, at the time he mentioned, no vessel of any description had passed anywhere near us.

"What did you make the craft out to be?"

"Well, sir, I couldn't say exactly. She was in sight only a minute, coming in range of our own lights. She looked more like a tug than anything else; but she had more speed than any tug I ever saw. She hadn't the lines of a yacht."

"She wasn't a pilot boat?"

"Oh, no, sir. New York pilots don't cruise this far east, and the Boston pilots wouldn't be so far away from home either."

I offered the captain a cigar, which he declined, filling his pipe in preference. When I lighted a cigar myself, I asked:

"I suppose you have some theory, MacLeod. You don't seriously think it was suicide?"

As usual he was slow to answer.

After a thoughtful second, he said: "I'd be sorry to think that, Mr. Clyde. Taking into consideration what you told me about the threat, and connecting that boat with it, it looks—"

"It's not in possibility," he went on, after a second, "that they could have plucked him off with a line. But if that fellow I saw going aft—Oh, Lord, no, sir! It's past me to see a way out. All the same, we are keeping that craft in sight, and if we can only get thirty knots out of the Sibylla again, we'll find out what she is and what her business is, before morning."

CHAPTER X.

A Woman of Intuition.

Ill tidings, always a heavy burden, never weighed more heavily on any one than on me that dismal, rainy Sunday morning, on which I stepped from the Sibylla's launch to the stone water steps of Cragholt. For two days we had searched the bays and inlets from Provincetown to Plymouth and from Siasconset to Providence; questioning at every pier and landing stage; making inquiry in every town and hamlet; but without a thimbleful of profit for our pains. As that black craft, with dimmed lights and muffled engines, had eluded our pursuit on the night of Cameron's disappearance, so for forty-eight hours succeeding she had baffled our quest. No one knew her; no one had seen her.

As for that shaken, frayed, pallid fisherman, Peter Johnson, he appeared below, rather than above, suspicion. If my knowledge of men went for anything he was too inferior both mentally and physically to be a participant in any such plot as was here involved. He seemed to me woefully weak and wasted, and with as little brains as sinew. So, with enough money for a new mast and sail, we had put him and his dory ashore at our first landing, and had forthwith forgotten him.

MacLeod had been inclined to continue the search, but I argued that any further efforts in that direction would be only a waste of time. The craft we were looking for might have come from any one of a thousand places and returned to any one of a thousand more. Some more effective, general and far-reaching steps must be taken, I held, and taken quickly. Indeed I felt now that to keep secret longer the conspiracy, as indicated in those mystical letters, would be little short of criminal. The aid of the police and the press must be invoked at once, and nothing left undone to trace the crime to its source.

But my first and most onerous task was to acquaint Evelyn Grayson with the facts as I knew them. How I shrank from that duty is beyond anything I can put into words. I know it would have been far easier for me to have carried her definite news of her uncle's death. What I had to tell was horrible in its stark obscurity. And yet, if I could have foreseen just what was to follow, I might have spared myself a goodly share of distress.

I imagined I knew Evelyn Grayson, before this. I thought I had sounded the profundities of her fortitude and courage on the night that I spread before her and read with her that third and last letter. But my fancy did her an injustice. She was even more of a woman than I dreamed.

Recently I chanced upon these lines by Thomas Dunn English, which must have been inspired by such a one as she:

So much is clear,
Though little dangers they may fear,
When greater perils men environ.
Then women show a front of iron;
And, gentle in their manner, they
Do bold things in a quiet way.

Evelyn Grayson did a bold thing in a quiet way that morning. I have not yet forgotten how marble white she was, and yet how bravely she came, with springing step and lifted chin and fearless eyes. I had waited her coming in the music room, with its score of reminders of happy evenings in which he had participated. The chair he usually chose, in the corner, near the great bow window against which the east wind was now driving the rain in gusty splashes, took on a pathos which moved me to weakness. The Baudelaire lyric, spread open-paged upon the music rack of the piano, stirred memories scarcely less harrowing. A photograph, an ash tray, a paper knife, all commonplace objects of themselves, but so linked to him by association, became, suddenly, instruments of emotional torture.

In this environment, under these influences, I rose to meet her, wordless. Yet my expression and attitude must have spoken loudly enough to confirm the dread that was in her heart, for even before she spoke I was sure that she knew. And then she had taken my two outstretched hands in hers and raised her brave eyes to mine, and low-voiced, but sure and tremulous, was saying:

"I feared it, Philip. From the very first, I feared it."

And when I told her all, to the smallest detail, it was as though she were the man and I the woman; for the recital had been for me a very painful confession of my own incompetence, and its conclusion left me more nervously unstrung than at any time since the night of the strange catastrophe. With what heroic fortitude she heard the narrative may best be indicated by the statement that throughout it all she sat calmly attentive, but unquestioning, and with no sign of emotion beyond her continued pallor and a recurrent tensing of her small white hands. At the end I leaned forward and with left elbow on knee rested my forehead in my palm. She sat beside me on the same settee; and now she drew closer, and laying her cool right hand over my own disengaged one, began stroking my hair with her left. For a full minute she said nothing. Then, in soothing accents:

"I am glad you didn't find the boat. That means he is on it. If you had found it, it would have been some ordinary thing having no connection with this affair, whatever."

It was odd reasoning, but very feminine, and in an esoteric way, forceful. "But you made one mistake, Philip," she went on. "You should not have let that fisherman, Peter Johnson, go."

$80,000,000 Lost Annually By Wage Earners.

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $80,000,000 in wages is lost annually by the American people as a direct result of colds. Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and soothe the sore and inflamed air passages. F. B. Johnson & Co.

At this I raised my head and regarded her with something like astonishment.

"He was one of them," she explained in a tone of conviction.

"How can you say that?" I asked, a little nettled. It annoyed me that she should be so positive, knowing no more of the man than that which I had told her.

"I feel it," she answered. And that was all the reason she could give.

I had not expected to find such development of intuition regarding worldly matters in one so young, and so fresh from conventional seclusion. And then her judgment seemed to keep pace with her auguries; for when I spoke of inviting the aid of detectives and the newspapers, she begged me to consider.

"I am afraid for him," she pursued gravely. "Publicity might mean death. If they discover they are being sought, they may murder him. Somehow, I feel he is still alive; and so we must do nothing that will incite them to further violence."

"But," I returned, conscious of the force of her argument, yet failing to see how this caution could very well be exercised, "we can't find him without seeking."

"No, but we can seek him in secret. The newspapers must not tell the world."

"The police would of course tell the newspapers," I added.

"We can do some things, without the police," was her next assertion. "There are some things that I can do; and there are more that you can do." She was thoughtful for a moment, and then: "I am so sorry about Peter Johnson! You should never have lost sight of him."

"We gave him money and God speed," I reminded her.

"Captain MacLeod must go back there, where you left him. Where was it? Siasconset? He must trace him. His trail won't lead to Gloucester, I'm sure of that."

My self-esteem was not being vigorously stimulated by the young lady at this juncture. Indeed, I was being made to feel more and more my strategic inferiority.

"And I," she continued, with the methodical expediency of a commander-in-chief, so curiously inapposite in one so young and inexperienced as she: "And I shall find out about those letters."

"Find out what?" I asked in astonishment.

"Find out what manner of man wrote them," she amplified.

"But how can you?" I inquired. "That seems a pretty big undertaking of itself, for one so small."

"I have thought of a way," she declared, noncommittally.

"And what am I to do?" was my next question, feeling miserably small beside this efficient child.

"You must give me the letter you have, and help me look for the others."

The first part of the command was easy enough of obedience; for the letter was in my pocket at the moment. But my assistance in searching for the first two communications was more energetic than successful. Together we ransacked desks, bureaux, tables, closets, trunks, clothes. Indeed, every possible hiding place both at Cragholt and on the Sibylla was carefully and systematically delved into and exhausted without reward. Either Cameron had destroyed the letters, or he had them on his person when he vanished from the yacht.

At Evelyn's request, however, I wrote copies of those two strangely couched, malevolent epistles, as nearly as I could remember them; and save, perhaps, for possibly two or three verbal errors they were, I think, quite accurate.

"And now," I asked again, "what am I to do?"

Antoine Deloria, Postmaster at Garden, Mich., knows the exact facts when he speaks of the curative value of Foley Kidney Pills. He says: "From my own experience I recommend Foley Kidney Pills, as a great remedy for kidney trouble. My father was cured of kidney disease and a good many of my neighbors were cured by Foley Kidney Pills. F. B. Johnson & Co.

Mrs. J. N. Hill, Homer, Ga., has used Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for years, and says she always recommends it to her friends. "It never fails to cure our coughs and colds and prevent croup. We have five children and always give them Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for a cold, and they are all soon well. We would not be without it in our house. F. B. Johnson & Co.

WANT ADS BRING RESULTS

WARFARE THAT ENDED MOST UNEXPECTEDLY

By GEORGE F. STAAT.

"Eggs again?"
It was a query, an accusation and a protest.

"Yep," said Tommy Thomas. "Why not? There's more nourishment in a soft-boiled—"

"Feather bed," interrupted his chum. "Truth is, you're too lazy to cook anything else."

"Ooooh, you tell whops! And what, Mr. Simian Wellington, did YOU cook last week?"

Simion was obliged to take the defensive. "Aw, but I didn't plain-boil and plain-broil till the hens came home. I served those eggs in eight different ways, and you know it."

"Yaas, and with the shells every time. Fact is, Sim, I'm tired of pot-wreslin'. I'll run you a race to the postoffice and back to see who cooks for a month."

"Nay, son. Not being blessed with drumsticks like yours, I'll have to decline your glittering offer. But I'll be sportier than that."

He picked up an egg, held it to the light, listened to each end mysteriously, and then rejected it. He took up another egg and did the same. After diagnosing the third, his face lighted with joy.

"A very strong egg, Tommy. A perfect type of the Roman arch. Now, sir, I can fix this egg so you cannot break it with an iron implement—er, that stove-lid, we'll say."

"Just try me."

"If you do, I'll cook for a month."

If you don't I'm to have riz biscuits and hot rolled oats for a month."

"I weep for a poor orphan like you, Sim, but—turn on the blizzard."

Wellington took his chosen egg—it was a small one—and stood it in a corner of the room.

It was an ancient trick, almost as old as the Columbus stunt, and Tommy knew he could not hope to break the egg in that position with the circular weapon. But he betrayed no chagrin. He calmly picked up a poker as well as the stove-lid, and proceeded to pry away the partitions forming the corner.

"I say," began Sim, fearsome for the landlady's bill. Then a brilliant idea bumped him.

Pfosh! A moist, warm, soft-boiled egg struck Tommy on his pet cockle and the effluvia began to cascade into his collar, thence to the back of his vest.

And the battle was on. Tommy jumped to the table and commanded the plate of cooked eggs. Sim rified the cupboard of the half-bagful of raw ones. Only a baseball reporter could adequately deal with the doings of those eggs thereafter.

Presently Sim retreated—or Tommy thought he did. He ran downstairs pursued by a "Yah, squealer, come again!" from the apparent victor.

On the first floor was a grocer's shop. A sign read:

FRESH RANCH EGGS,
35c doz.

"Gimme two dozen eggs," cried Sim. "Charge it to Mr. Thomas, as usual."

Ustairs he galloped and began a fusillade from the doorway. Poor Tommy dodged behind the bed. Sim entered and pursued him from his hiding place, punctuating his howls with fresh ranch eggs. Tommy now fled, but grabbed the door key as he ran.

Sim understood. Tommy was coming back with ammunition. He moved bed, oil stove and table against the door. He was in the act of uprooting the stationary wash basin when a balmy, squashy, not-quite-so-guaranteed ranch egg hit him in the bridge of his nose. It had come over the transom.

The next one decorated his shirt front. The third missed him and broke the mirror. Eggs now came thick and fast, two whole dozen, at 35 cents per, pursuing him to the fire escape. With simian agility he made his way down to that corner grocery and asked for more eggs.

But Sim was in too big a hurry to explain. He gathered up all the eggs left in the crate, put them into a huge paper bag and with a "Charge 'em to Mr. Thomas," bounded up those stairs again.

Tommy was nowhere in sight. The barricade had been pushed in.

"But I'll get the rascal," muttered Nemesis-of-the-Ova. "He's gone after more eggs. Score one point for me."

He shut the window to prevent a rear attack, then threw up fortifications in front of the open door.

Steps, soft steps, ascending the stair! A head looming from the semidarkness, looking inquiringly into

NO DANGER OF A CIVIL WAR

Rival Factions in China Not Fomenting Trouble.

DR. SUN GIVES HIS VIEWS

Chinese Liberator Sets at Rest Certain Reports That Have Been Circulated in America and Europe Tending to Create the Impression That He and Yuan Were So Completely at Loggerheads That War Was Imminent.

Nanking, Sept. 24.—Recently cabled to England and repeated in the American press were sensational reports of the mysterious disappearance of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the former provisional president of China. Coupled with this report was the rumor that he had quarrelled with the president of China and that he had been put to death by a band of assassins. Dr. Sun promptly stamped these rumors as designed inventions by the enemies of China.

"The relation between President Yuan and myself are personally very cordial," he declared. "It is true that we do not agree upon all matters of public policy, but our differences are those which the world expects to find among its public men. I believe I can safely say that upon one matter of first importance all the leaders in China are of one mind: The best good of the country."

An Interesting Comparison.

"No one thinks of civil war in the United States simply because Mr. Taft, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Roosevelt do not agree on matters of public policy. Each of these gentlemen is certainly a true American and a patriot of a very high order. Yet there are—if my knowledge of American affairs is worthy—many great and vital issues upon which they disagree totally. May it not be so in China?"

"I have but within a few hours returned from a visit to the capital; to which, if foreign journals are to be credited, I hardly dared visit because of the personal danger I would run. It is too bad; it is wicked indeed that such ideas should be published broadcast."

"I wish to go on record," he continues, "once and for all as saying that in spite of the efforts, past or future, of the enemies of the Chinese republic, there will be no civil war in our country. China has been credited with having been a 'sleeping nation' for centuries, and in a certain sense—in many senses, in fact, the phrase has been correctly applied. But our enemies must not count too confidently upon China as being asleep today. Her leaders are awake to the needs of her people, to the call of the Twentieth century, to the hopes and ambitions of the present."

"We understand too well that men of power—not to include at present certain nations—would view with a greater or lesser satisfaction an internal rupture in the new republic. They would welcome as a move to the accomplishment of their own ends and designs a civil war between the provinces of the north and the south. Just as fifty years ago there was applause in secret (in certain quarters) over the terrible strife in the United States."

In Light of History.

"Had that war been successful from the south's standpoint and had two separate republics been established, is it not likely that perhaps half a dozen or more weak nations would eventually have been established? I believe that such would have been the result, and I further believe that with the one great nation divided politically and commercially, outsiders would have stepped in sooner or later and made of America their own. And I feel that we have just such enemies abroad as the American republic had and that at certain capitals the most welcome announcement that could be made would be that of a rebellion in China against the constituted authorities."

"However, foreign ill-wishers may as well understand first as last—perhaps better now—that the men who are at the forefront of Chinese affairs are a unit for the republic as established, and cannot be brought, individually or in factions, to oppose the onward march of the Chinese nation."

"I believe I am voicing the sentiment of a united and unanimous people when I warn troublemakers at home or abroad that the Chinese nation has joined the great family of republics to remain a member thereof at whatever cost or sacrifice."

SEARCHED EVERYONE FOR POSSIBLE ARMS

Strict Precautions Taken at the Snead Hearing.

Amarillo, Tex., Sept. 24.—In Judge Browning's courtroom twenty deputies stood guard during the habeas corpus hearing of John Real Snead, who on Sept. 14 shot and killed here Al Boyce, who eloped with Snead's wife last winter. Every person entering the courtroom, man or woman, was searched for firearms. Snead appeared in the courtroom showing no emotion and still wearing a beard, which was the disguise he affected upon approaching Boyce.

Members of the Boyce family were only fifteen feet from him, but between them was a barrier of attorneys, deputies and friends. There was no outward show of animosity. Snead continues to smoke his cigarettes. Witnesses described the actual killing and Snead's appearance at the time. The hearing will last for four or five days.

NATURE'S HINT

How the Absence of Clothes Levels All Social Ranks.

Vienna, Sept. 24.—The levelling influence of nakedness has had a serious and at the same time comic result in the Hungarian baths at Budapest. Count Karl Esterhazy, returning from a dip, was entering his dressing cabinet when he collided with Ladislav Racz, the thirty-sixth son of the so-called "Gypsy King."

Both of the men being undressed, there was nothing to differentiate their social position. The count, being angry with Racz for bumping him, slapped his face. The gypsy thereupon seized the count and hurled him through a glass door, the nobleman being severely cut.

Racz was horrified when he learned of his victim's identity, and Count Esterhazy in turn was furious on hearing that his assailant was a gypsy, the count's social rank making it impossible for him to fight a duel with his bathing opponent.

Lake-To-The-Gulf Deep Waterways Association May Take a Stand in Politics.

G. O. P. PLANK IS THE BEST

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 24.—Politicians as well as business men are interested in the seventh annual convention of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association which began here today. It is considered possible because of the importance of the presidential campaign the convention will go on record through the endorsement of a candidate.

Friends of President Taft declare that he easily would have a majority, as the Republican platform has the best plank on a government policy of taking over the work of building and keeping the levees.

POLICE INQUIRY GROWING WARM

James Creelman Passes Lie On Witness Stand.

COUNSEL FOR THE COMMITTEE

Was Flatly Contradicted by the President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, Who Also Takes Direct Issue With Waldo and Refers to Investigation as a "Petty Little Republican Ring Affair."

New York, Sept. 24.—On the witness stand at the aldermanic investigation, James Creelman, president of the municipal civil service commission, called Emory R. Buckner, counsel for the committee, a liar.

He referred to the investigation as a "petty little Republican political ring affair." And he contradicted under oath the sworn testimony of Commissioner Waldo, who had said he turned over to Mr. Creelman for investigation the papers in all cases of men whom he appointed to the police department after they had been rejected by Commissioner Cropsey. Mr. Cropsey had refused to make the appointments on the basis of reports by the police investigation bureau, which Commissioner Waldo abolished.

Commissioner Waldo had sworn that he turned over to Mr. Creelman the papers in all the disputed cases so that the civil service commission might make the proper investigations. Commissioner Creelman swore on the stand that Commissioner Waldo had taken to the offices of the civil service commission papers in, as he recalled, forty-seven cases and had selected out of that number some ten cases. These latter papers he had taken away with him, never turning them over to the civil service commission, the witness said. In a number of the remaining thirty-seven cases, Mr. Creelman stated, Commissioner Waldo had asked that the names be recertified, and this request had been complied with without investigation by the civil service commission.

In the case which remained two methods of disposition were employed, in a part of these cases the applicants were called before the commission and questioned by President Creelman. Each applicant was asked to explain false statements he had made in his affidavit, and in practically every case he pleaded that he had not understood the question on the affidavit as to whether or not he had ever been arrested.

Mr. Creelman became incensed at a question and interpolated a statement in which he characterized as a lie the remark made by Mr. Buckner in the examination of Mayor Gaynor regarding an increase in the rates for burglary insurance in New York, saying that he declined to be examined further by a liar, referred to the lying reports of the police investigation bureau, called the aldermanic investigation a "petty little Republican ring political affair," and called Alderman Dowling a liar when the Republican alderman objected to such characterizations.

CALLS ON HILLES

President Taft Drops in on His Campaign Manager.

Washington, Sept. 24.—President Taft left here at 10 o'clock this morning for New York, where he will have a conference with Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. Taft will arrive in New York about 3:30 o'clock and will go to the home of his brother, H. W. Taft, for dinner. In the evening he will attend the theater and will leave at 11:30 for Altoona, where he will address the meeting of the loyal war governors. He will leave Altoona tomorrow afternoon for Philadelphia, where his private car will be attached to the Colonial express bound for Boston. The president is due in Boston early Thursday morning.

Perkins Asks That Hilles's Testimony Be Demanded.

New York, Sept. 24.—George W. Perkins has written a letter in which he accuses Charles D. Hilles, the Taft campaign manager, of telling a "plain downright lie" in saying "Roosevelt spent millions of dollars of harvester trust money to gain the Republican nomination." In another letter he asked Senator Moses Clapp to call Mr. Hilles as a witness before the committee that is investigating campaign gifts, "in order that Mr. Hilles may be required to testify fully as to this charge that he makes."

Wilson Off For New England.

Sea Girl, N. J., Sept. 24.—Governor Woodrow Wilson yesterday afternoon went by automobile to Trenton to board his private car for Scranton, where he last night opened the Pennsylvania campaign. The nominees of the Pennsylvania state ticket were officially notified of their selection on the same occasion. The governor voted in the primaries at Princeton today and then started for New England for a three days' trip.

WILL REPUBLICANS INDORSE STRAUS?

Interesting Movement On Foot at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 24.—In a maze are the Republicans over their candidate for governor. When former Speaker James W. Wadsworth, Jr., arrived he went into immediate consultation with his friends. It was particularly observed that he rather contended to President Koenig and Herbert Parsons of New York county. It is in that county it is expected that ex-Judge Job E. Hedges is to develop marked strength. All told, ex-Judge Hedges's friends declare that he is to start with 300 delegates, some of his strength coming from Kings and much additional support coming from upstate counties. Mr. Wadsworth announced when told of Judge Hedges's reported strength: "I certainly don't know how many delegates I have, but I am going to stay in this race to the end. I want that nomination."

While ex-Speaker Wadsworth is very popular with many of the Republican leaders and the delegates, they state that it would be exceedingly risky to nominate him. William A. Smith, the leader of Tioga county, is a strong advocate of Hedges. He said: "The farmers of western New York want Hedges."

The Orange county delegation has been engineering a movement to bring about the nomination for governor of Oscar S. Straus, who was nominated recently by the Progressive state convention. Quite a bunch of delegates are in hearty sympathy with the Straus movement.

Chairman Barnes and his friends stated that it would not be possible to nominate Mr. Straus. They did not believe that the delegates desired to endorse any act of the Bull Moose convention. William Berri continues his activities for a direct nominations plank in the platform, but Chairman Barnes and others will not accept the plank unless forced to do so.

HE ARRAIGNS BOSS SYSTEM

he cited that Bryan called Sullivan, the Illinois Democratic boss, a train robber, and Murphy, the New York boss, a thief. He said it was useless to enumerate the things Bryan had said about Tom Taggart, the Indiana boss.

Humbly the former senator, with sad mein and mournful looks, announced that he had tried to make it a rule of his life not to be bitter, but declared he could not refrain when he thought of the bosses in the Republican party. He admitted he disliked those in the Republican party more than those in the Democratic party.

Beveridge said Gov. Wilson made a little sport toward making laws against the "invisible government" in New Jersey, and that before he had finished, he found himself bound and gagged.

"If mighty Cleveland could not control the little bosses in his party in his day, how can weak Wilson expect to control the mighty bosses in his party today?" was the way the candidate put the question.

Another admission of the former senator: He said they always had trouble getting along with him in the senate, and when he came home, he found the Republican bosses had captured the Republican party leadership and made a mess of everything. He said he found graft in the State government.

He charged that the system of taxation for roads in Indiana is all wrong, and that the bosses manage to get the money some way or other. When he gets to be governor, he said he would fix all that up.

He lay the fact that the school books in Indiana are changed with the ever-changing times, to the door of the bi-partisan bosses. He said there was a school book trust, which, also, would be routed, when he got to be governor.

He said the public service corporations in Indiana had a combination to defraud the people and that there should be a public utilities commission. He promised legislation in that regard, too.

Beveridge asserted a vote for Durbin is a vote for the Republican machine and that a vote for Ralston is a vote for Tom Taggart's machine. He recalled that he referred recently to Sam Ralston as Tom Taggart's candidate and that Mr. Ralston got rather ruffled about it. Beveridge said that Ralston rather denied that he is Taggart's candidate.

He quoted from the Indianapolis News' news column and editorials, showing the News had presented Mr. Ralston as a candidate of Taggart's machine immediately after he was nominated in the State convention. He added the comment that the News is so violently against Roosevelt that it would swallow Ralston, Taggart machine and all.

Beveridge presented the initiative, referendum and recall as a cure for most every evil. He said they would do away with lobbyists and bosses.

"Every boss, legislator and corrupt legislator, and every 'bad' trust is against us," continued Mr. Beveridge, "because they know if our ticket is elected the boss system will go."

Beveridge said the Bull Moosers intended to destroy rotten methods of building tariff laws and to make a tariff law that will give the laborer a legitimate wage.

Beveridge advocated the minimum wage law for women, child labor legislation, a workmen's compensation act and recalled the marvelous deeds of Roosevelt while he was president. He characterized the act of Roosevelt in cabaling the Russians and the Japs to stop fighting—and said they did at his mandate—the greatest act of any man at any given time in the world.

NEWCASTLE IS COMING SUNDAY

Special Train Will Bring Maxwells and 300 Fans For Game Here With Locals.

ONE BIG CONTEST OF THE YEAR

State League Winners Will be Given Hard Battle by Rushville—Second of Series.

The attraction at the South Main street grounds Sunday will be the Maxwell team of Newcastle, winners of the Indiana State League pennant. The news that Newcastle would play the locals on the home lot was greeted with enthusiasm by the fans here.

Following the original schedule it was Newcastle's time to come here and as the famous Maxwell team has never played here the fans and rooters were anxious for the game.

Rushville and Newcastle have played in tough luck for the last two Sundays, rain keeping the two teams apart. It was only after considerable talk that Manager Maibaugh was able to convince Dal Williams that the team should play here and the arrangement meets with the entire satisfaction of the fans.

Newcastle will come to Rushville on a special train over the Big Four. Stops will be made at Knightstown and Carthage and a number from these towns will pay a visit here. It will be one of the big games of the year for Rushville and as the season is nearing an end the largest crowd ever at the park is expected. At least 300 fans from the Rose City will accompany the Maxwells.

Rushville supporters are anxious for a victory over Newcastle and Manager Maibaugh desires to cop the contest. The game should be a battle from start to finish. The locals' lineup will be changed but little and will be announced later in the week. The extra seats at the ball park are still in place and accommodations for the large crowd have been made.

Watson Can Explain About Campaign Contribution, Ludlow Writes.

Louis Ludlow, Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis Star, contributes a story today which is in effect that James E. Watson was intrusted with a $25,000 contribution in 1908 to further the interests of Charles W. Fairbanks who was a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

It is said that Mr. Watson has told several persons of this contribution, and that he will be able to explain all the details of how the money was raised and how it was disbursed, when called to the witness stand, Ludlow writes. For the present the alleged source of this lump contribution is withheld from publication. The investigation may take Mr. Watson out of the campaign a few days, Ludlow says.

Albert J. Beveridge Charges Old
Parties Are Ruled by "Invisible Government."

SPEECH AT THE COLISEUM

Bull Moose Candidate Governor Sets
Out Examples to Prove His Contention.

Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator and Bull Moose candidate for governor, devoted a good part of his two-hour speech at the Coliseum last night to an arraignment of the so-called bi-partisan boss system and invisible government and the Indianapolis News.

The candidate expressed appreciation for the number of old soldiers who appeared on the stage, and paid a tribute to Nate Weeks, now deceased, the Rush county candidate for the legislature two years ago with the aid of whose vote Mr. Beveridge expected to be returned to the senate. Rush county gave Mr. Weeks the normal Republican majority.

Mr. Beveridge referred to the veterans of the civil war all as Whigs or Democrats in their earlier days, but all patriots who found their party was not representing them. He likened the leaders in the formation of the Bull Moose party to Oliver P. Morton, who as a young Democratic lawyer left his party, and Abraham Lincoln, who deserted the Whig party to form the Republican party.

He said the little politicians, with orders from higher authorities, come to the voters and ask them to stand by the party of Jefferson and the party of Lincoln. He asserted the same plea was made to Lincoln and Morton in their day. "We tried to get the parties to obey the peoples' will," he continued, "and couldn't, so we formed a new party."

Mr. Beveridge defined the much-used term, "invisible government" as a partnership of wicked and mighty "interests" for the purpose of securing their unjust gain from the people, gain not only from their pockets but also at the expense of their health and life.

The candidate launched forth into an abusive denunciation of what he chose to call the bi-partisan boss "system," including the little politicians who get their orders from Indianapolis.

His first example of the fancied boss system was the opposition to the meat inspection bill, which Mr. Beveridge admitted he framed and Theodore Roosevelt forced through a reluctant congress.

Beveridge's second exhibit was the tobacco trust which he declared,

THAT BEVERIDGE CROWD.

Of course, the size of the crowd at the Beveridge meeting last night, is a much-mooted question, made so by the expected and usual exaggeration by the Indianapolis Star, a Bull Moose organ which is very biased in its opinions as regards politics. John M. Maxwell, the Star correspondent, who follows the Bull Moose gubernatorial candidate over Indiana, without any apology, stated in bold type that the crowd consisted of 2500 people. Of course, Rushville and Rush county people who have been attending the chautauqua in the Coliseum know that the largest crowd of which the assembly ever bragged of being seated in the inclosure was not quite equal to that. And last night the Coliseum was not full by any means, possibly two-thirds is a fair estimate. And the Star correspondent must have been off a thousand, anyway—and one thousand people are a good many. People came here from Connersville, Greensburg, Shelbyville and other surrounding cities. A special car was run from Morristown.

filed 140 million dollars from the government in seven years (No records other than his word were offered in evidence.)

Exhibit number three was the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill. He declared he and Dolliver, voted against the bill because it was written by "invisible government." He declared the duty on structural iron was raised from forty to a hundred and sixty per cent, according to cost by the Payne law. He said senators favoring certain schedules formed coalitions with other senators who favored other schedules being raised, and traded about in voting for each other's increase.

Mr. Beveridge charged that the candidate of the Republican party stole the nomination at Chicago. "I trust you get the meaning of that word 'stole'" he said. He declared the bulk of the Republican States of the North voted to send the Roosevelt delegates from the thirteenth Indiana district. He alleged fraud was perpetrated in the primary in Indianapolis held to elect delegates to the Indiana convention. He did not state that the Republican national committee, on which were fifteen avowed Roosevelt men, voted unanimously to send the Taft delegates from Indiana, thus proving beyond a doubt that there was no basis for the claim of fraud in the Indianapolis primaries.

"Now what do you think of that?" asked Beveridge in summing up. "How do we know?" shouted a man in the audience.

Beveridge pointed out that Wilson could control the bosses in his own party, and to prove there are bosses,

COUNTY VOTE IS FIXED AT 5,678

Election Commissioners Get Estimates From Counties to Figure
Number of Ballots.

3,172 PRECINCTS IN THE STATE

Judging From Official Figure More
Votes Will be Cast Than
in 1908.

The State board of election commissioners has completed its estimate of the total vote that will be cast in Indiana at the coming election by all parties and the issuance of the number of ballots to each county that is required by law will begin immediately. Figures, compiled by the force of assistant clerks, working under Ed D. Donnell, clerk of the board, show that the estimated vote in the State will be 788,353. In the 1908 presidential election, the board's estimated vote was 782,781. The total vote of the State, cast that year, according to the records of the secretary of State, was 721,126 for the presidential candidates.

The figures are the result of calls made on county clerks and auditors for estimates as to the total number of ballots needed in each precinct in the State. To the estimated totals of the county officials is added 25 per cent by the State board, making 986,016 this year. The board also adds two thousand ballots to the shipment to each county as a reserve package. Adding two thousand to each county's quota the total number of ballots that will be sent out this year is 1,170,016.

The State board sent out 1 163,498 ballots in 1908.

The total number of precincts in the State is 3,172. The county officials of Brown county have not yet returned their estimate to the election board and their estimates of eight years ago has been used by the board. In many counties the estimates are not accurate, it is believed.

The vote to be cast in Rush county November fifth is estimated at 5,678. The estimates of other counties in this district is: Fayette, 5,163; Franklin, 4,447; Hancock, 4,955; Henry, 8,012; Shelby, 8,422; Union, 2,200 and Wayne, 16,350.

AGED WOMAN DIES OF TUBERCULOSIS

Mrs. Sarah Linville, Age 78, Expires
at Her Home in Clarksburg
Sunday.

LIFE LONG RESIDENT THERE

Mrs. Sarah Linville, a well known and highly respected resident of Clarksburg, died at 2 o'clock Sunday morning after a lengthy illness of tuberculosis, says the Greensburg News. Her death had been expected for several months, for her condition was of a nature that showed the inevitable was near at hand.

Mrs. Linville was past seventy-eight years of age and was the widow of Jesse Linville, who passed away more than twenty years ago. She had been almost a life long resident of the Clarksburg community and was known and esteemed by many.

She is survived by five sons, three daughters and a number of grandchildren. The funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Presbyterian church in Clarksburg, of which the deceased was a member of many years standing.

HOPKINS SAYS HE ISN'T GUILTY

Kentuckian is Arraigned on Grand
Jury Indictment For Shooting
Lee Somers Last June.

IS RELEASED ON $1000 BOND

Claude Levi Also Pleads Not Guilty
and Gives Court Recognizance—
Civil Cases.

William Hopkins, living north of Carthage, who shot Lee Somers Wednesday, June 12, after an argument over a line fence between their farms, was arrested late yesterday on an indictment returned by the grand jury which adjourned Friday. Hopkins was arraigned in court, pleaded not guilty and his bond was fixed at a thousand dollars. Court recognizance was furnished by W. H. Sharer of Carthage and he was released.

Hopkins has been at Liberty since the shooting. He was arrested a short time afterwards and was released on a hundred dollar bond furnished by the same man. At first Somers was thought to be fatally hurt and Hopkins escaped the sheriff and police and fled. He later returned and gave himself up to the authorities.

Claude Levi, charged with assault and battery with intent to kill, was arraigned late yesterday afternoon before Judge Blair and pleaded not guilty. He was released under $500 bond. The bond was reduced from $1000, and was furnished by his father, Cal Levi, and Ol. M. Dale. Levi was first arraigned in police court and while awaiting trial was indicted by the grand jury. Levi slashed Jake Williams with a knife a week ago Saturday night.

Thus far five of the nine indictments returned by the grand jury have been served, the other three being one against Roy Murphy, who, it is alleged, obtained money under false pretenses, and the two against Mrs. Minnie Montgomery for keeping a house of ill fame and contributing to delinquency. Both languish in jail because they are unable to furnish bond.

Several civil cases have been disposed of already this week. The divorce case of Effie Pearl Short against Orbie J. Short, in which five thousand dollars alimony was demanded, was dismissed and the costs paid.

The divorce suit of Corn B. Gard against James Gard for a thousand dollars alimony was sent to Franklin county on a change of venue, which was asked by the defendant. Ten days was allowed for the change to be perfected.

Trial finding and judgment for the plaintiff was returned by Judge Blair in the case of Building Association No. 10 against Walter Bartlett, Annie Bartlett and the Rush Land Company in the sum of $646.27, which includes attorneys' fees. The sum of $750 was demanded in addition to possession of real estate and the foreclosure of a mortgage.

In the case of James A. Root against himself as administrator of the estate of Sarah A. Root, deceased, on an account in which $400 was demanded, Judge Blair returned judgment in the sum of a hundred dollars.

In the partition suits of Eva Offutt and others against Paul R. Offutt and others, and George W. and J. M. Coon against Hickson H. Stevens and others, final reports have been filed and approved and the commissioners discharged.

In the evening he was one of the speakers at a big meeting in the Knights of Columbus hall, where former Congressman James E. SAME TAX LEVY AS LAST YEAR

Council Passes Ordinance Fixing
Rate at One Dollar on Each
One Hundred Dollars.

TO READVERTISE FOR BIDS

Contracts For Ninth, George and
Hannah Street Improvements
to be Let Oct. 8.

The city council met in special session last night to receive bids on the proposed improvements of George, Ninth and Hannah streets and incidentally passed the tax levy ordinance, the appropriation ordinance and transacted considerable business of minor importance.

George and Ninth streets are to be stone roadway and Hannah street is to have more cement sidewalks. The specifications for the improvements were not on file in time for the contractors and no bids were received. The council ordered the improvements readvertised and set October 8 as the time for awarding the contracts.

The tax levy ordinance and the appropriation ordinance were identical to the ones passed last year. The ordinance governing the tax levy calls for a levy of $1 on each $100. This is the same rate as has been in force for a number of years. The council appropriated approximately $60,000 for expenses during the year. The ordinance is exactly like the one passed a year ago.

Street Commissioner Kelley reported that the improvement of the Main street crossing of the C. H. & D. railway cost the city $173.55. This is below the estimated cost. The estimate of the city engineer called for an expenditure of $180. The crossing has been completed and is now in first class condition.

The directors of the horse show petitioned the council for the use of the streets and three policemen during the event. As the council has no power to grant the use of the streets this was turned down but with the understanding that the horse show take the streets anyway. The request for three extra policemen was granted.

The council adopted a scale of prices for electricity for power use. The rate is as follows: 1 to 500 kilowatts, .05; 500 to 1000 kilowatts, .04; 100 to 1500 kilowatts, .03; over 1500 kilowatts .02. The rate is the same as has been in force but was never adopted.

Few Things Beveridge Carelessly Omitted

Albert J. Beveridge, former United States senator and Bull Moose candidate for governor, omitted a number of important things in his speech at the Coliseum last night.

He did not mention county local option at any time. Since this is a vital question in this campaign in Indiana, he might have at least given it a few moments of his valuable time. He might have stated that when he had control of the Republican party machinery in Indiana two years ago that he choked a temperance plank out of the platform. He might have recalled that a few earnest farmers forced the plank in the Bull-Moose platform against his wish.

Mr. Beveridge did not discuss anything that is vitally interesting to a farming community, such as Rush county is. He did not arraign the Harvester trust, which controls and keeps up the price of the farming implements which farmers buy, because that is counted a "good" trust by the Big Bull Moose, Theodore Roosevelt, and also because George W. Perkins, one of the organizers of the trust, is the "angel" of Roosevelt's campaign who underwrote

What Our Neighbors Are Talking About

BEVERIDGE'S SOPHISTRY.

Albert J. Beveridge, until recently a professed republican, for twelve years the representative of Indiana in the upper branch of the congress, chosen for the senatorial office by the Republican party of Indiana, now the candidate of the Progressive party for governor of Indiana, for many long years has been the personal friend of the editor of The Herald. In all those years we supported him in his political undertakings, in so far as they concerned the operations of the Republican party. We are trying hard even at this time not to fall out with him and to give him credit for sincerity of purpose, even though his judgment is sadly in error. It is his privilege to change his political affiliations. We are not complaining of that. It is his right to leave the Republican party and join the third party, if he feels that way. The Republican party signally honored him, and he undoubtedly owed it a certain fealty. Perhaps he considers the debt cancelled. Maybe it is, from his point of view. That is neither here nor there. He is within his rights as a free American citizen in leaving it. But is manner of embracing his new gods certainly tries one's patience sorely. For instance he said in one of his speeches the other day.

"The nation's wealth is great, but it is in the hands of the few who stole it. Because you do not wear purple and fine linen, and fare sumptuously every day is not your fault, but of those who have despoiled you. You are as much entitled as any one to automobiles, and yachts, and palaces by the sea, and refinements of servants, and assuredly these blessings would be yours if you had your dues. These good things belong to you and if our party is successful we shall despoil the Egyptians who have despoiled you and you will come into your own."

Read without other knowledge of the author than the sentiment conveyed by the paragraph we have quoted, one might with reasonable safety ascribe these words to Eugene Debs or Anna Goldman, rather than to the man who held the dignified office of senator of the United States from the sovereign state of Indiana. A few years ago such a proclamation from the arch-socialist Debs would have been met by the senator from Indiana of whom we speak with a justifiable outburst of eloquent and indignant protest, if indeed he had deemed it worthy of his notice.

Sometimes we are almost tempted to believe that a few of the leaders of the new party have eaten of the root that stupifies the perceptions, else they would not, with startling suddenness, go plump, heels over head, into the noisome and miasmatic swamps of socialism. The very essence of socialism is the breeding of a sentiment which arrays the classes against one another, and inculcates malice and hatred. If Mr. Beveridge's words do not belong with the declamation of the diseased imaginings of the socialists then we do not understand the meaning of words.

No one knows better than Mr. Beveridge that everybody can not, in the nature of things, have automobiles and palaces and retinues of servants. His specious declarations and sophistic and untenable predictions and promises are entirely discreditable to a man of intelligence, education, refinement and knowledge or irrevocable natural laws.

SOME MORE STANDARD OIL CORRESPONDENCE

Joe Sibley Had a Friendly Tip for Archbold.

New York, Sept. 24.—Hearst's Magazine for October, under the heading "More Standard Oil Letters," gives further evidence of the efficacy of Standard Oil cash in purchasing legislation. Here is a sample:

House of Representatives, Washington, Wednesday, Jan. 6, 1904. My Dear Archbold: Your telegram received. Sorry you cannot run over for a day. Think it most important for you to know the situation. The president was delighted to know that he had been misled as to the attitude of the S. O. Co., or rather "delighted" to know that the report was untrue. I think you can put in a very profitable hour over here. I know who told him, but I cannot repeat it.

I asked you and Mr. Rogers a question at the lunch table yesterday that, if you chance to remember it, may afford a clue. I much prefer that you learn the situation from the president's own lips and not from me. He urged strongly that you come over and meet him and said he wanted you at luncheon, where he could have a quiet talk with you. I cannot solve the motives of the ones who put him on the wrong tack, but he was there and told me the story so far as I would let him do so; I finally said, "Please do not tell me, but if Mr. Archbold comes over you tell him."

In official life the invitation of the president is regarded in the nature of a command, and our friend probably construes it so, as strongly as anyone. Should you wish to meet him, or wish not to do so, please tell me, and I will make excuse or arrangements, as you indicate.

If you cannot run over this week, can you come next? You will get a first-class reception, and will have a great surprise. I shall keep track of matters here and will advise you of any matters of general interest. The puzzle, however, is no longer a Washington but a New York one, and the New York situation is Greek to me.

Please command me in any way, and believe me, sincerely yours,

JOS. C. SIBLEY.

In another letter to Archbold, dated Washington, Nov. 23, 1903, and marked confidential, Sibley says in part: "My Dear Mr. A.—A Rep. U. S. senator came to me today to make a loan of $1,000. I told him I did not have it, but would try and get it for him, and would let him know in a day or two. Do you want to make the investment? He is one who will do anything in the world that is right for his friends, if ever needed. Please telegraph me yes or no."

WHERE DO BULL MOOSE STAND?

Strength of New Party in Maryland Can Not be Determined Until After Election.

STRANGE REGISTRATION LAW

In Class With Socialists And Prohibitionists Until Ten Per Cent of Vote Polled.

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 24.—There will be a new general registration in this city this fall, the first setting being today, with others tomorrow, October 1, 2, 8, 9, and 12. There is one day for revision only, October 15.

In the counties there will not be a new registration until 1914, but the law passed at the last session of the legislature provided for the transcribing of all names in new books and hereafter all voters must affiliate. They were obliged to do this before they could vote in the recent primary, but as only comparatively few participated the bulk of the voters have not declared. As there will not be another primary until the fall of 1913, when candidates for the legislature and local candidates are to be nominated, the voters not yet affiliated may declare their party allegiance either when the lists are revised on October 1, 8 and 15 or when they register in 1913.

In other words the law which applied until recently only to Baltimore city now applies to the entire state. Of course only Republicans and Democrats are recognized. Followers of the Bull Moose are in a class with the Prohibitionists and Socialists until they have polled 10 per cent of the entire vote cast in the state. The strength of the new party cannot be determined until after the next regular election, which takes place in 1913. It matters not how many votes the Bull Moose candidates may poll this fall, their party can have no standing until after the state election.

If the followers of Roosevelt are sincere they must cut loose from the Republican party. In such an event they will be unable to affiliate and must go into the "declined" column.

Some Health Rules To Prevent White Plague

The Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has just issued a one-syllable compilation of Rules for Health. Primarily, the rules are to be used in connection with a campaign against the White Plague, but they cover simple precautionary measures against all diseases. The list will shortly be printed on cards and distributed through tenement districts.

The "Health Rules" are as follows:

Good Air—Avoid badly ventilated, badly lighted, dusty, dirty, overheated or damp rooms.

Avoid House Dust—Breathing dust, notably house dust, often causes disease. Have no tacked-down carpets and matings. Have loose pieces or rugs, and clean them frequently outdoors. Use a hair broom for your floors and keep lower sashes closed while sweeping or dusting. Open upper sashes, if possible. Never sweep rooms with a broom that raises dust.

Pure Water—Drink pure water. Avoid water from shallow and unprotected wells, and from ponds and streams. If in doubt, boil the water. Avoid public drinking cups.

Safe Milk—Tuberculosis, typhoid fever, and other diseases are often caused by drinking raw milk and raw cream. Get milk properly pasteurized, or home pasteurize it, or simply scald it. All cream, including that used for ice creams and butter, should be properly pasteurized to be safe.

Keep Clean—Take a bath or sponge daily, and a warm bath, followed by a cold splash, plunge, or shower, once or twice a week or oftener. Use soap freely. Wash your hands before handling food. Don't put fingers, money, paper, or pencil in your mouth. Don't bite your fingernails. Clean your teeth morning and evening.

Food—Don't eat raw food that was exposed to flies or dust, or touched by unclean hands. Fruits or vegetables so exposed should first be rinsed or washed thoroughly. Chew your food well.

Sleep—Get enough sleep. Sleep with windows open, or better still outdoors.

Head Up—Sit and stand erect. Breathe through your nose.

Exercise—Take plenty of outdoor exercise, but avoid excess in athletics; it may cause heart trouble. Don't eat or drink when overheated by exercise.

Liquor and Tobacco—Avoid liquor and tobacco. They are especially injurious to the young.

Don't Neglect Colds—Don't neglect coughs or colds. If you do not get well soon, go to a doctor or dispensary for treatment. Never cough, sneeze, or breathe into another's face. Don't spit on floors and sidewalks.

Sunshine—Admit plenty of sunshine into your houses and into your lives. Cultivate cheerfulness and kindness; it will help you to resist disease. Your mind acts on your body.

U. A. Smith, Bridgeton, Ind., had kidney trouble for years, and was so crippled with rheumatism he could not dress without help. He started using Foley Kidney Pills, and says: "I began to get better at once, and now all my trouble has left me and I do not feel that I ever had rheumatism. I rest well at night and tho' 59 years old, can now do the work of a man of 35 years. I would like to be the means of others getting benefit from Foley Kidney Pills." Refuse substitutes. F. B. HUNDRED NAMES NOW DRAWN

That Many of the Men Named in the First Panel of Jurymen in the Important Cases to Be Heard at Indianapolis Will Be Barred, Seems So Well Assured That a Second List of Fifty Has Been Named.

Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—That the choosing of a jury for the dynamite conspiracy cases pending in the federal court, which will start Oct. 1, will consume much time and that many of the men named in the first panel of jurymen will not prove satisfactory to the attorneys of both sides, seems to be assured. So sure of this are those closely connected with the trial that a second panel has been drawn to be used after the first panel, chosen a month ago, is exhausted.

The second panel, as did the first, includes fifty men. Those whose names were drawn live in different parts of the state, and will be notified by the United States marshal.

Secret preparations for the trial have been going on for months. Just how many witnesses have been subpoenaed, many guesses have been made, but no official announcement has been given to the public. However, it was unofficially stated at the office of United States Attorney Miller that the list of witnesses might reach 600. Who these are is being kept secret until the time of the trial.

W. N. Harding, who has charge of the defense of the fifty-one indicted men who will be tried for conspiracy in the dynamite plot, and other attorneys who are assisting him, are giving their undivided attention to the case. The defendants will begin coming to Indianapolis this week for interviews with their attorneys. Mr. Harding acknowledged that all would be in Indianapolis two days before the starting of the trial, Oct. 1. Further than to say the defense would be ready when the trial opens, Oct. 1, Mr. Harding would make no statement.

DECLARES INNOCENCE

Mrs. Epps Says Deathbed Confession Clears Her Name.

Huntington, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mrs. Charlotte Epps, who served twenty-three years for the murder of her husband, John Epps, plans to bring legal action to clear her name and to seek damages from the state for false arrest and imprisonment. The action is based on the alleged deathbed confession of Ed Meis, half brother of Epps, who, according to the woman, gave Epps poison.

Mrs. Epps was convicted and sent to prison in 1883. In 1905 she was released on parole. Her conviction was on circumstantial evidence only, and she has always stoutly maintained her innocence. With the confession of Meis, of which she says she has proof, she plans to reopen the case.

Meis lived with Mr. and Mrs. Epps. He endeavored to obtain some of Epps' property. Epps died suddenly and mysteriously, and his viscera showed traces of poison. Mrs. Epps was convicted on the theory that she had tried to get control of her husband's property.

Woman Gave the Alarm.
Anderson, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mont Justice, aged twenty-six, on parole from the reformatory for the theft of a laprobe, was captured by the police while he was in the act of robbing William Rank's grocery. Justice broke the glass in the door. A woman living opposite the store heard the crash and saw a man crawling through the door. The woman telephoned to police headquarters and the police surrounded the store and arrested Justice.

Double Tragedy at Clinton.
Clinton, Ind., Sept. 24.—Mrs. J. L. Church, divorced wife of Grover Jackson, a miner, was shot and killed by Jackson. He then blew out his own brains. The tragedy occurred at the Church home. Mrs. Church obtained a divorce about a month ago and married J. L. Church, a liveryman, who was absent at the time of the shooting. Mrs. Church was twenty-two years old.

Shortage of Laborers.
Indianapolis, Sept. 24.—"We could use 500 men today if we could find them," said Oswald Stahl, clerk in the state's free employment bureau at the statehouse. "Incessant calls for factory and railroad laborers are reaching the office every hour and there apparently are no men for the jobs that are waiting for them."

Thief Made Rich Haul.
Lafayette, Ind., Sept. 24.—A robber made a rich haul at the office of the Lafayette Artificial Ice company when he worked the combination of the safe and obtained $1,200 in cash and $500 in checks.

Suicide of a Farmer.
Lebanon, Ind., Sept. 24.—James W. Nicely, a farmer of Jackson township, this county, swallowed two ounces of carbolic acid and died in a half hour after taking the acid.

National Chairman Would Use Brilliant, as Applied to Prospects, Rather Than Bright.

KENTUCKY COMING TO FRONT

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

New York, Sept. 24.—Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican National Committee, informed his workers today that he wanted them to substitute the word "brilliant" for bright when speaking of the President's prospects for re-election. "Taft sentiment is going ahead in leaps and bounds," said Hilles. "Henchmen inform me that the Ohio situation is rapidly taking shape, and that Mr. Taft is becoming especially strong here. This information merely corroborated a large number of similar reports coming to my office, all of which are to the effect that Ohio does not need a third party, does not want a third party, and will not take a third party. They another Republican President and will cast their votes for Mr. Taft."

"I am informed that Kentucky is another state which is rapidly coming into the Republican column. There are some very good reasons why this is so. The deciding factor in most of the Kentucky elections is the negro vote. The Kentucky negroes were greatly embittered against Col. Roosevelt because of his attempt to disfranchise the Southern negro while seeking to gain their support in the North by pretending to think they were more capable of casting an honest vote."

WILSON'S ENEMY IN RACE

James Smith After Senatorial Nomination in New Jersey.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 24.—The feeling is intense in both parties in this state today over the primary elections which will decide upon a man for United States Senator. United States Senator F. O. Briggs, Republican, is fighting for the nomination over several other candidates. On the Democratic side United States Senator James Smith's nomination has been the bone of bitter contention between Governor Wilson and the Smith followers. If Smith wins, it is said he will give fight for the defeat of Wilson on the National ticket.

COLORED EDUCATORS GATHER.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)
Washington, Sept. 24.—Negroes prominent in educational circles from all parts of the country are here for the national congress of colored educators in connection with the national jubilee in commemoration of the fiftieth anniversary of Lincoln's emancipation proclamation, which opened here today.

GOPHER REPUBLICANS MEET.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)
Detroit, Sept. 24.—Following close upon the county convention, the Michigan Republican Convention met here today. John Baird, of Saginaw, wants the temporary chairmanship to go to Victor Gore, of Benton Harbor. There may be a contest over the temporary chairman, however. The contest in this state this year will probably be over the governorship, as it is generally conceded the presidential candidate to be given the big vote is William H. Taft.

WILSON TO SPEAK.

(Special to the Daily Republican.)
Memphis, Tenn., Sept. 24.—Gov. Woodrow Wilson is expected to be one of the distinguished guests at the annual convention of the National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which began here today. Representative Joseph E. Randall is president of the congress, which has been commended by the government for its great work. An interstate levee convention is being held in connection with the rivers and harbors meeting.

Tariff Commissions.

The Democratic Congress which recently adjourned, contemptuously dismissed the non-partisan tariff board which at the instance of President Taft, had been making exhaustive and scientific investigation into tariff problems. Valuable information which the board had gathered was thrown away by the Democrats, who proceeded to draft their tariff bills in the secrecy of the committee room.

In abolishing the tariff board, the Democrats had the aid of some of those who are now loud in support of the Third-term Party. The leader and standardbearer of that party, in his speeches and in a recent article in his magazine, likewise has treated the board with contempt. However, he urges the establishment of a new sort of a tariff commission.

In accordance with the habit of his mind, he turns to Germany for his ideal of such a commission. It is a curious fact that, though always asserting his belief in the ability of the people to rule, he invariably selects a rigid bureaucratic model whenever proposing new governmental machinery for this republic.

While the Democrats and the Third-termers are condemning, more by silence than by direct attack, the American tariff commission, it is interesting to observe that from Europe come words of appreciation. Thus, in discussing the American tariff board's report on wool, an official of the Royal Imperial Ministry of Commerce of Austria, regarded as the leading European authority on the tariff question said:

"It is an excellent standard work. The tariff board has come within a very short time to the head of all the similar boards established a long time since in other countries. It is really true that no legislative body has ever had presented to it a better report on the tariff question. It will be also entirely impossible not to take your results in mind in proceeding to a revision of the tariff. It would be a great mistake to stop the work of the board, and it would soon prove necessary to re-establish it."

So while we have the Third-termers urging the adoption of a European system of tariff commission for the United States, the European authority on the subject is holding up our commission, which the Democrats and Third-termers destroyed, as a model for the world.

The incident illustrates the evil worked to the cause of good government in the United States by partisan and factional jealousy and selfishness.

Absalom and Politics.

Colonel Roosevelt has a good deal to say about Armageddon, but he does not mention the story of Absalom. That narrative shows that Roosevelt had his counterpart centuries ago.

Absalom organized a conspiracy against his father, David. He went to work in Roosevelt fashion. For forty years he sat at the gate and met the men who came up to the city seeking the judgment of the king upon their controversies. Absalom greeted every man cordially and then according to the story in the fifteenth chapter of Samuel, the following occurred:

"And Absalom said unto him, See, thy matters are good and right; but there is no man deputed of the king to hear thee.

"Absalom said, moreover, O that I were a judge in the land, that any man which hath any suit or cause might come unto me and I would do him justice."

By thus offering all things to all men, Absalom became very popular. He was the original demagogue. He finally secured a following large enough to start his rebellion, but he never had a chance to redeem his promise. In the first place, his army was defeated and, in the second place, he was killed and his body was thrown into a pit.

The modern Absalom travels over the country and insists that if he were only president the welfare of every individual would be his personal care. Many people believe in him, just as people believed in Absalom, but the rebellion which he has organized will, like Absalom's, go down into history as a defeated cause.

Roosevelt's Approval.

Although reciprocity is now a dead issue, farmers and others who are opposed to President Taft because he endorsed reciprocity should remember that President Taft did not take action until his course had received the full approval of Mr. Roosevelt.

"It is greatly to your credit to make the effort," wrote Mr. Roosevelt to President Taft on January 12, 1911, and in a speech at Grand Rapids, Mich., a month later he expressed to the people of Michigan his pleasure, because, as he thought, reciprocity with Canada would soon be an accomplished fact. A day or two afterwards he commended the members of the Republican club of New York city for the manner in which they were upholding the bands of President Taft in his efforts to secure reciprocity with Canada. Mr. Roosevelt was an earnest friend of reciprocity, and shifted only when he found that the scheme was unpopular.

More than this, he said in his letter to President Taft, "I firmly believe in free trade with Canada." This went far beyond President Taft's proposition.

It is worth while to remember also that if the Democrats should come into power Canada would obtain reciprocity which would give everything from that country, and from which the United States would get nothing in return.

Harmony in the Democratic party is exemplified by the acrobatic activities of the governor of New Jersey in avoiding being photographed with the governor of New York—and some of his supporters.

"We don't have to have very much brains to read statistics, and statistics are open to every man," remarks Candidate Wilson. Curious that he hasn't read any on the tariff question.

Down in Jersey they say that few offices have been mentioned in the presence of Woodrow Wilson in late years without his speculating with a suspicious degree of interest about their probable economic importance.

Labor was never so well paid as today, and the farmer was never so well rewarded for the product of his toil as today.

Falls Victim to The Poetic Muse

Miss Laverne Conway of this city has fallen a victim to the alluring heroes and heroines of motion pictures, and she has given vent to her feelings with verse. It is acceptable verse, too, as is evidenced by the fact that the Motion Picture Story magazine thinks enough of it to give it space. The following poem is printed in the current number of the magazine, with the following comment over it:

Good for you Laverne; the more artists you admire, the more you'll enjoy your evenings at the photoplay. It's tiresome waiting for the "only onliest" favorites to promise to appear—and then not to, night after night:

There's two fair maids that I've watched ever so long,
Tho' I seldom see them here in song.
But, in my opinion, well they've fared—
These two little maids, Ormi Hawley and Leah Baird.

Sometimes, when I go to a picture show,
And see Leah play with Maurice Costello,
I say to myself, she's sure a queen,
And my pulses beat wildly when they are flashed on the screen.

Ormi, little girl, how I love to see you play,
Especially if it's with John Halliday.
You two together, it's a treat to see;
My praises for you will last till eternity.

I love Alice Joyce, Harry Meyers, and a great many more,
And there's lots and lots whom I simply adore.
But to sum it all up, the ones I like best
Are Leah and Ormi, out of all the rest.
—Laverne Conway.

BEVERIDGE'S OMISSIONS

more than a hundred thousand dollars to finance his race for the Republican nomination. The Harvester trust has been sued by the Taft administration.

The Bull Moose candidate did not discuss the high cost of living, as his chief has. He did not promise to reduce that. It would be attacking the vitals of a farming community. It is the farm products that are so enormously high and he farmers are getting the returns.

Mr. Beveridge had nothing to say about the prices farmers are receiving for the stock and crops. He did not recall that during the period of depression under Democratic regime, prices fell off because mills were closed, money was scarce and there was no market for their commodity. Mr. Beveridge did not say that the present prosperity is due to the protective policy of the Republican party. Rush county people are not so much concerned about what happens over in Massachusetts or out in California as they are with what takes place here in Rush county.

Beveridge spoke of the little politicians who takes his orders from Indianapolis, referring to the two old parties. He, of course, omitted any mention of Boss Ed Lee's orders out of Indianapolis. He failed to call the attention of the crowd to the fact that Boss Lee had ordered a county ticket put out in every county to be in keeping with the "rule-or-ruin" policy of the Bull Moose party.

The candidate referred to the perfdity of the boss system. He neglected to recall the campaign of 1910 when he was one and only boss in the Republican party in Indiana. He ran everything according to his own discretion. He said Ed Lee would make a good headman for State chairman. Due to an oversight, doubtless, he did not mention that every candidate for office on the Republican party two years ago had to take an oath of allegiance to the grand I Am Albert Jeremiah. We printed a case a few days since in which a candidate for supervisor—this little minor office—was called upon to swear his fidelity to the State boss, Mr. Beveridge. Yet this system is all very bad now. It has required all these years to get this soaked through Albert's cranium.

Mr. Beveridge observed facetiously last night that old line politicians say we have more prosperity than ever before and that there is no use of passing it around, with the added comment that he used to indulge in that himself before he knew better. A poor testimonial of his intelligence, don't you think, that it required the dozen or more years he has been in public life to be enlightened? He had to wait until Roosevelt was defeated for a third term nomination which he would have taken from the convention with delegates whose seats would have been very much in doubt, according to the vote of his own national committeemen, before he came to the sudden realization that the Republican party was wholly bad and contained no element of good.

At the outset the Bull Moose candidate announced he wished people to ask him questions to clear up his misconstrued statements, but he made a demand that the question be on the subject under discussion. This would, if followed, would do away with any questions concerning the activity of Boss Bill Flynn, George Perkins, Frank Munsey, a trust magnate and numerous other powers in high finance who are supporting the Bull Moose candidate.

Mr. Beveridge was always renowned for his modesty. His reputation in this regard extends to the far corners of the nation. In so many words last night, after he had assumed a humble main, he asserted that he wrote the meat inspection bill and T. R. forced it through congress. Hurrah for us! We were always under the impression that this is a representative government in which the people's representatives do the law making, and not a one-man affair. Or perhaps we should add a two-man affair and not leave out Jeremiah.

Beveridge did not spend much time on the Republican convention. He could not without letting the audience know some of the facts. He mentioned, of course, the two Indiana contests. He told of the alleged illegal voting in the Indianapolis primary. He did not say that the allegation was only in one ward, and that the impeaching witness before the national committee and the credentials committee admitted he could not claim fraud enough to change the result in the ward. Albert did not recall that the Taft Indiana delegates-at-large were seated by a unanimous vote, which included those of fifteen Roosevelt members of the committee.

Beveridge's own perfidity was revealed in declaring with mournful countenances that he always made it a rule of his life never to be bitter, but that he could not refrain from it when he thought of the bosses in the Republican party. We could not but think there was a bit of spite in that remark. He had been assailing the great bi-partisan bosses all evening. But, when he assumed that confidential air with the audience he must confess to this dead unsuspecting public down here that the Republican bosses really were the worst to be truthful about it. The bosses with which he has been associated for more than twelve years and which he did not discover until Roosevelt couldn't get a nomination from the Republican party.

Beveridge's modest admissions were so common that we almost overlooked one. He acted like he really thought so when he said that they all had a lot of trouble getting along with him when he was in the senate.

Beveridge saw fit to say that every "bad" trust was against the Bull Moose party. The steel trust and the Harvester trust, you may remember, have been given the stamp of approval by Mr. Roosevelt, Beveridge's chieftain. He said the oil trust was supporting Taft and the tobacco trust, Wilson, but kindly and graciously omitted the names of the trusts back of the Bull Moose party.

Beveridge discussed the minimum wage scale for women and described some of the conditions under which women work. Out of pure negligence and oversight, he did not mention that he found these facts from a report of a special commission which investigated the Harvester trust binder twine factory where women the report said, were working twelve hours a day under very unsanitary conditions and for wages that would hardly keep body and soul together.

SPICELAND BOY UP FOR FORGERY

Omer Lloyd, Son of Robert Lloyd, is Arrested in Osborne, Ohio.

IS TAKEN BACK TO NEWCASTLE.

It is Charged he Forged His Father's Note to a Note For Sum of $151.

Omer Lloyd, a former automobile workman and formerly employed at the Hoosier Kitchen Cabinet factory, was brought to this city Sunday and turned over to local officers by Sheriff W. B. McClandish of Green county, Ohio, under arrest on the charge of forgery, says the Newcastle Courier. He was arrested by the Ohio sheriff at Osborne, Ohio, a small town near Xenia, Saturday night.

Lloyd, whose father, Robert Lloyd, resides in Spiceland, has been wanted by the local authorities for some time. It is charged that he forged his father's name to a note for $151 given to Ernest Milikan of near Spiceland, in payment for a horse. The father was sued on the note and the forgery was detected when he pleaded in his answer to the complaint in the suit that he had not signed the promissory document.

Lloyd was run down by clever work on the part of H. H. Evans, prosecuting attorney. The accused forger was formerly a member of the Newcastle company of the national guard. After he had fled from arrest he wrote to Capt. W. R. Myers of the guard for his discharge. He asked that the papers be sent to Osborne, Ohio.

The letter was found in a waste basket by Prosecuting Attorney Evans and he at once had a warrant issued for the arrest of Lloyd. The warrant was sent to Sheriff McClandish at Xenia and that official immediately began watching for Lloyd.

Saturday night Lloyd appeared at the postoffice at Osborne and inquired for his mail. As he was given the letter that was in the postoffice box he had rented he was arrested by the sheriff. Lloyd put up a stiff fight, but he was finally overpowered and handcuffed.

KEEPS CROWD WAITING

Beveridge Arrives Late and Other Speakers Fill In.

Albert J. Beveridge was an hour late in arriving at the Bull Moose meeting in the Coliseum last night, and the time intervening after the crowd gathered was given over to the candidate for joint senator from Fayette, Rush and Hancock counties, who made a short plea for votes. Gurlief Gensen of Shelbyville, who was yesterday nominated for Sixth district congressman at Connorsville, made a short speech in which he reiterated that the Bull Moose platform embraces all reforms, and is built around the home so that it will protect boys and girls from evil.

The young women of the Plum Creek Christian church will hold an exchange in John B. Morris' hardware store next Saturday. The proceeds will go toward a new piano.

SOCIETY NEWS

The Band of Workers of the First Presbyterian church will be entertained by Mrs. Jesse Winslip, Mrs. Ruby Petry and Mrs. Herman Jones, at the home of Mrs. Winslip in West Ninth street tomorrow.

Mrs. J. M. Amos and Mrs. Charles Crumpacker entertained at the Amos country residence yesterday with a shower for Miss Florence Frazee, who is soon to be married to Helm Woodward of Cincinnati.

No one who has heard Mrs. May W. Donnan lecture needs to be urged to attend the new course which will begin October 5, at half-past two in the Graham school building.

The special subject this year is Shakespeare. Several seasons ago Mrs. Donnan gave some notable lectures in Rushville on the historical plays of Shakespeare. Since that time there have been many requests for a series which would include the comedies and tragedies; her lectures this year will not be a repetition of what was given then, though some of the English historical plays will be used. Mrs. Donnan has studied Shakespeare with some of the best professors in this country and in England and she not only has knowledge but a way of her own in telling what she knows that never fails to please. Her method is an easy conversational manner and her intensely interesting appreciation heightens every claim and deepens every truth. As usual Mrs. Donnan will give some time at each lecture to new books, essays, novels, poems. This is an invaluable feature to the busy woman who would like to keep in touch with the best that is being done and said in the literary world but who has little time for reading.

Mrs. Donnan's continual plea for what is best for the use of books in a profitable and inspirational way is so effectively made that her lectures are in the highest degree educational and constructive and are to be judged, not by themselves, but by their total effect and service.

Anderson Herald; Ralph Gard, the Rushville young man who was injured at the Big Four yards a few weeks ago, improves slowly at St. John's hospital. He will not be able to return home for some time.

RUSHVILLE MAN GETS INTO POLITICS

John Garr is Worsted in Fistic Encounter at Shelbyville After Argument.

RELEGATED TO THIRD PLACE

A political discussion in the Williams saloon Saturday afternoon warmed up rather too much and after they had talked over the situation now existing politically and had discussed the merits of the respective favorite candidates until they had aroused themselves to the fighting pitch, John Garr of Rushville, Harry Taylor, better known as "Tader," and Jerry Worland, the last two named of this city, engaged themselves in a lively fistic encounter as a final means of settling their argument, says the Shelbyville News.

As soon as this mode was adopted Garr soon lost out of the argument completely. Taylor and Worland soon proving that they had been right in their contentions and giving Garr the third place.

Patrolman George Tolen placed Taylor under arrest and immediately took him before Justice Pryor, where he pleaded guilty to a charge of assault and battery and was assessed a fine and costs of ten dollars and thirty-five cents, which he did not have the ready cash to pay and was taken to jail to spend eleven days as the guest of Sheriff Terry.

The Sable Lorcha
BY
Horace Hazeltine

(Copyright, 1912, A. C. McClurg & Co.)
I started at the speaker for an instant in absolute dumb amazement.
"I don't know why you say that," I said, at length, more hurt than angered. "I told you that from the moment I last spoke to him, seated beside him there on the after-deck, until I turned from the rail and found him gone, not more than two minutes elapsed. And that was God's truth."
"You said you were listening for what you thought sounded like a motor boat, didn't you?"
"I did."
"And you were leaning over the taffrail, looking for it, weren't you?"
"I was."
"But you didn't see it?"
"No, I didn't see it; and I couldn't hear it after the first few seconds."
The captain had fixed a gaze on me that seemed aimed to penetrate to my soul's fiber. After my answer he was silent a moment. Then he said:
"Where were you, Mr. Clyde, when that boat—motor, tug, or whatever she was—crossed within ten feet of the dory we are towing?"
Had he struck me in the face I could not have been more dumfounded.
"What do you mean?" were the only words that came to me.
"I mean that the craft you have been talking about came up and went astern of us, ten or twelve minutes before you gave the alarm that Mr. Cameron had vanished under your eyes. I was on the bridge and saw it myself—just a black shape, without lights, and her exhaust muffled, just as you say. You tell me that you and Mr. Cameron had been sitting there for three hours, at least; that you heard seven bells strike; that it was not more than fifteen or twenty minutes after this that you got up and went to the rail, and that you only stood there two minutes."
"I told you all of that, and every word is the truth," I insisted, vehemently.
"And yet," he retorted accusingly, "and yet—eight bells had struck before you gave the alarm."
I had not thought of the time. In my panic it had not occurred to me, of course to ascertain the hour and minute. But Captain MacLeod knew. At sea they work by clock. At eight bells the watch had changed.
"My dear fellow," I exclaimed, raising my voice, "I certainly cannot for a moment suspect me of complicity."
He stood up, too; imperturbable.
"I just want those things explained, that's all," was his reply.
"And I can't explain them," I told him, candidly. "You say you saw the boat. I didn't. You say it was after midnight when I came to you. It may have been. I don't know. It may have been nearer twelve, when I went to the rail. My impression is that it was not. I'll admit it is mysterious. The whole awful thing is mysterious."
My commander seemed to relieve him.
"Well, Mr. Clyde," he said, with equal sincerity, "maybe I was out-spoken, but I wanted to know what you'd say to the points that were puzzling me."
"You did perfectly right," I told him. "As you have said, there must be no secrets between us." And then.

SERIOUS ERROR IN RUSHVILLE
Rushville Citizens Will do Well to Profit by the Following.
Many fatal cases of kidney disease have reached an incurable stage because the patient did not understand the symptoms. Even today in Rushville, there are many residents making the same serious error. They attribute their mysterious aches and pains to overwork, or worry, perhaps, when all the time their rheumatic pains, backache and bladder irregularities are most probably due to weak and ailing kidneys. If you are ill, if your kidneys are out of order, profit by this Rushville resident's experience.
Mrs. William Merrill, 332 W. Fourth street, Rushville, Ind., says: "I suffered for quite awhile from weakness in my back. I had a dull pain over my kidneys, often accompanied by headaches. The simplest of my household duties was a burden. I finally got Doan's Kidney Pills at Johnson's Drug Store and used them. They proved their merits by entirely relieving me."
For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

As I resumed my seat, I asked: "What about the fisherman? He hasn't evaded his guard, has he?"

MacLeod sat down again too.

"He's in where I put him, now," he answered with a shade of reluctance, "but—I'm not sure; it's almost as mysterious as the other—but I could have sworn I saw him come up that forward hatchway and go sneaking aft while I was on the bridge."

"When was that?" I pressed, eagerly.

"About a quarter of twelve."

"What did you do?"

"Nothing, just then. I waited. And while I was waiting I saw that black, spooky craft come out of the dark, and go skimming astern of us. A little after eight bells I came down from the bridge—I stopped there for just a minute to have a word with Brandon when he came up—and then I went myself to look after Johnson and the man I'd set to watch him. The fisherman was in a bunk sound asleep, and the man swore he had been lying there snoring, for the past two hours. 'Who was it came up the ladder twenty minutes ago?' I asked. He looked at me as if he thought I was gone suddenly loony. 'Before the watch changed?' he asked. I nodded. 'Not a soul came or went,' he said, 'since I been here.'"

"And the boat without lights?" I questioned. "Did you inquire about her? Who else saw her?"

"I asked the lookouts; but—well, no, sir—and that's very strange to me—neither of them saw her. I gave them both a rating. If they weren't asleep I don't see how they could have missed her."

The thing was growing more and more baffling. MacLeod was the last man to be accused of imaginative fancies. He was thoroughly in earnest in what he had told me; and yet for neither of his statements had he the smallest corroboration. For my own part I was sure that, at the time he mentioned, no vessel of any description had passed anywhere near us.

"What did you make the craft out to be?"

"Well, sir, I couldn't say exactly. She was in sight only a minute, coming in range of our own lights. She looked more like a tug than anything else; but she had more speed than any tug I ever saw. She hadn't the lines of a yacht."

"She wasn't a pilot boat?"

"Oh, no, sir. New York pilots don't cruise this far east, and the Boston pilots wouldn't be so far away from home either."

I offered the captain a cigar, which he declined, filling his pipe in preference. When I lighted a cigar myself, I asked:

"I suppose you have some theory, MacLeod. You don't seriously think it was suicide?"

As usual he was slow to answer. After a thoughtful second, he said:

"I'd be sorry to think that, Mr. Clyde. Taking into consideration what you told me about the threat, and connecting that boat with it, it looks—"

"It's not in possibility," he went on, after a second, "that they could have plucked him off with a line. But if that fellow I saw going aft—Oh, Lord, no, sir! It's past me to see a way out. All the same, we are keeping that craft in sight, and if we can only get thirty knots out of the Sibylla again, we'll find out what she is and what her business is, before morning."

CHAPTER X.

A Woman of Intuition.

Ill tidings, always a heavy burden, never weighed more heavily on any one than on me that dismal, rainy Sunday morning, on which I stepped from the Sibylla's launch to the stone water steps of Cragholt. For two days we had searched the bays and inlets from Provincetown to Plymouth and from Siasconset to Providence; questioning at every pier and landing stage; making inquiry in every town and hamlet; but without a thimbleful of profit for our pains. As that black craft, with dimmed lights and muffled engines, had eluded our pursuit on the night of Cameron's disappearance, so for forty-eight hours succeeding she had baffled our quest. No one knew her; no one had seen her.

As for that shaken, frayed, pallid fisherman, Peter Johnson, he appeared below, rather than above, suspicion. If my knowledge of men went for anything he was too inferior both mentally and physically to be a participant in any such plot as was here involved. He seemed to me woefully weak and wasted, and with as little brains as sinew. So, with enough money for a new mast and sail, we had put him and his dory ashore at our first landing, and had forthwith forgotten him.

MacLeod had been inclined to continue the search, but I argued that any further efforts in that direction would be only a waste of time. The craft we were looking for might have come from any one of a thousand places and returned to any one of a thousand more. Some more effective, general and far-reaching steps must be taken, I held, and taken quickly. Indeed I felt now that to keep secret longer the conspiracy, as indicated in those mystic letters, would be little short of criminal. The aid of the police and the press must be invoked at once, and nothing left undone to trace the crime to its source.

But my first and most onerous task was to acquaint Evelyn Grayson with the facts as I knew them. How I shrank from that duty is beyond anything I can put into words. I know it would have been far easier for me to have carried her definite news of her uncle's death. What I had to tell was horrible in its stark obscurity. And yet, if I could have foreseen just what was to follow, I might have spared myself a goodly share of distress.

I imagined I knew Evelyn Grayson, before this. I thought I had sounded the profundities of her fortitude and courage on the night that I spread before her and read with her that third and last letter. But my fancy did her an injustice. She was even more of a woman than I dreamed.

Recently I chanced upon these lines by Thomas Dunn English, which must have been inspired by such a one as she:

So much is clear,

Though little dangers they may fear,

When greater perils men environ.

Then women show a front of iron;

And, gentle in their manner, they

Do bold things in a quiet way.

Evelyn Grayson did a bold thing in a quiet way that morning. I have not yet forgotten how marble white she was, and yet how bravely she came, with springing step and lifted chin and fearless eyes. I had waited her coming in the music room, with its score of reminders of happy evenings in which he had participated. The chair he usually chose, in the corner, near the great bow window against which the east wind was now driving the rain in gusty splashes, took on a pathos which moved me to weakness. The Baudelaire lyric, spread open—upon the music rack of the piano, stirred memories scarcely less harrowing. A photograph, an ash tray, a paper knife, all commonplace objects of themselves, but so linked to him by association, became, suddenly, instruments of emotional torture.

In this environment, under these influences, I rose to meet her, wordless. Yet my expression and attitude must have spoken loudly enough to confirm the dread that was in her heart, for even before she spoke I was sure that she knew. And then she had taken my two outstretched hands in hers and raised her brave eyes to mine, and low-voiced, but sure and tremulous, was saying:

"I feared it, Philip. From the very first, I feared it."

And when I told her all, to the smallest detail, it was as though she were the man and I the woman; for the recital had been for me a very painful confession of my own incompetence, and its conclusion left me more nervously unstrung than at any time since the night of the strange catastrophe. With what heroic fortitude she heard the narrative may best be indicated by the statement that throughout it all she sat calmly attentive, but unquestioning, and with no sign of emotion beyond her continued pallor and a recurrent tensing of her small white hands. At the end I leaned forward and with left elbow on knee rested my forehead in my palm. She sat beside me on the same settee; and now she drew closer, and laying her cool right hand over my own disengaged one, began stroking my hair with her left. For a full minute she said nothing. Then, in soothing accents:

"I am glad you didn't find the boat. That means he is on it. If you had found it, it would have been some ordinary thing having no connection with this affair, whatever."

It was odd reasoning, but very feminine, and in an esoteric way, forceful.

"But you made one mistake, Philip," she went on. "You should not have let that fisherman, Peter Johnson, go."

$80,000,000 Lost Annually By Wage Earners.

Dr. Sadler estimates that about $80,000,000 in wages is lost annually by the American people as a direct result of colds. Lost time means lost wages and doctoring is expensive. Use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound promptly. It will stop the cough, and heal and soothe the sore and inflamed air passages. F. B. Johnson & Co.

At this I raised my head and regarded her with something like astonishment.

"He was one of them," she explained in a tone of conviction.

"How can you say that?" I asked, a little nettled. It annoyed me that she should be so positive, knowing no more of the man than that which I had told her.

"I feel it," she answered. And that was all the reason she could give.

I had not expected to find such development of intuition regarding worldly matters in one so young, and so fresh from conventional seclusion. And then her judgment seemed to keep pace with her auguries; for when I spoke of inviting the aid of detectives and the newspapers, she begged me to consider.

"I am afraid for him," she pursued gravely. "Publicity might mean death. If they discover they are being sought, they may murder him. Somehow, I feel he is still alive; and so we must do nothing that will incite them to further violence."

"But," I returned, conscious of the force of her argument, yet failing to see how this caution could very well be exercised, "we can't find him without seeking."

"No, but we can seek him in secret. The newspapers must not tell the world."

"The police would of course tell the newspapers," I added.

"We can do some things, without the police," was her next assertion. "There are some things that I can do; and there are more that you can do."

She was thoughtful for a moment, and then: "I am so sorry about Peter Johnson! You should never have lost sight of him."

"We gave him money and God speed," I reminded her.

"Captain MacLeod must go back there, where you left him. Where was it? Siasconset? He must trace him. His trail won't lead to Gloucester, I'm sure of that."

My self-esteem was not being vigorously stimulated by the young lady at this juncture. Indeed, I was being made to feel more and more my strategic inferiority.

"And I," she continued, with the methodical expediency of a commander-in-chief, so curiously inapposite in one so young and inexperienced as she: "and I shall find out about those letters."

"Find out what?" I asked in astonishment.

"Find out what manner of man wrote them," she amplified.

"But how can you?" I inquired.

"That seems a pretty big undertaking of itself, for one so small."

"I have thought of a way," she declared, noncommittally.

"And what am I to do?" was my next question, feeling miserably small beside this efficient child.

"You must give me the letter you have, and help me look for the others."

The first part of the command was easy enough of obedience; for the letter was in my pocket at the moment. But my assistance in searching for the first two communications was more energetic than successful. Together we ransacked desks, bureaux, tables, closets, trunks, clothes. Indeed, every possible hiding place both at Cragholt and on the Sibylla was carefully and systematically delved into and exhausted without reward. Either Cameron had destroyed the letters, or he had them on his person when he vanished from the yacht.

At Evelyn's request, however, I wrote copies of those two strangely couched, malevolent epistles, as nearly as I could remember them; and save, perhaps, for possibly two or three verbal errors they were, I think, quite accurate.

"And now," I asked again, "what am I to do?"

To be continued.

WARFARE THAT ENDED MOST UNEXPECTEDLY

By GEORGE F. STAAT.

"Eggs again?" It was a query, an accusation and a protest.

"Yes," said Tommy Thomas. "Why not? There's more nourishment in a soft-boiled—"

"Feather bed," interrupted his chum.

"Truth is, you're too lazy to cook anything else."

"Oooh, you tell who! And what, Mr. Simian Wellington, did YOU cook last week?"

Simian was obliged to take the defensive. "Aw, but I didn't plain-boil and plain-broil till the hens came home. I served those eggs in eight different ways, and you know it."

"Yaas, and with the shells every time. Fact is, Sim, I'm tired of pot-wreslin'. I'll run you a race to the postoffice and back to see who cooks for a month."

"Nay, son. Not being blessed with drumsticks like yours, I'll have to decline your glittering offer. But I'll be sportier than that."

He picked up an egg, held it to the light, listened at each end mysteriously, and then rejected it. He took up another egg and did the same. After diagnosing the third, his face lighted with joy.

"A very strong egg, Tommy. A perfect type of the Roman arch. Now, sir, I can fix this egg so you cannot break it with an iron implement—er, that stove-lid, we'll say."

"Just try me."

"If you do, I'll cook for a month. If you don't I'm to have riz biscuits and hot rolled oats for a month."

"I weep for a poor orphan like you, Sim, but—turn on the blizzard."

Wellington took his chosen egg—it was a small one—and stood it in a corner of the room.

It was an ancient trick, almost as old as the Columbus stunt, and Tommy knew he could not hope to break the egg in that position with the circular weapon. But he betrayed no chagrin. He calmly picked up a poker as well as the stove-lid, and proceeded to pry away the partitions forming the corner.

"I say," began Sim, fearsome for the landlady's bill. Then a brilliant idea bumped him.

Pfosh! A moist, warm, soft-boiled egg struck Tommy on his pet cowlick and the effluvium began to cascade into his collar, thence to the back of his vest.

And the battle was on. Tommy jumped to the table and commandeered the plate of cooked eggs. Sim rifled the cupboard of the half-bagful of raw ones. Only a baseball reporter could adequately deal with the doings of those eggs thereafter.

Presently Sim retreated—or Tommy thought he did. He ran downstairs pursued by a "Yah, squaleer, come again!" from the apparent victor.

On the first floor was a grocer's shop. A sign read:

NO DANGER OF A CIVIL WAR

Civil Factions in China Not Fomenting Trouble.

DR. SUN GIVES HIS VIEWS

Chinese Liberator Sets at Rest Certain Reports That Have Been Circulated in America and Europe Tending to Create the Impression That He and Yuan Were So Completely at Loggerheads That War Was Imminent.

Nanking, Sept. 24.—Recently cabled to England and repeated in the American press were sensational reports of the mysterious disappearance of Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the former provisional president of China. Coupled with this report was the rumor that he had quarrelled with the president of China and that he had been put to death by a band of assassins. Dr. Sun promptly stamped these rumors as designed inventions by the enemies of China.

"The relation between President Yuan and myself are personally very cordial," he declared. "It is true that we do not agree upon all matters of public policy, but our differences are those which the world expects to find among its public men. I believe I can safely say that upon one matter of first importance all the leaders in China are of one mind: The best good of the country."

An Intriguing Comparison.

"No one thinks of civil war in the United States simply because Mr. Taft, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Roosevelt do not agree on matters of public policy. Each of these gentlemen is certainly a true American and a patriot of a very high order. Yet there are—if my knowledge of American affairs is worthy—many great and vital issues upon which they disagree totally. May it not be so in China?"

"I have but within a few hours returned from a visit to the capital; to which, if foreign journals are to be credited, I hardly dared visit because of the personal danger I would run. It is too bad; it is wicked indeed that such ideas should be published broadcast."

"I wish to go on record," he continues, "once and for all as saying that in spite of the efforts, past or future, of the enemies of the Chinese republic, there will be no civil war in our country. China has been credited with having been a 'sleeping nation' for centuries, and in a certain sense—in many senses, in fact, the phrase has been correctly applied. But our enemies must not count too confidently upon China as being asleep today. Her leaders are awake to the needs of her people, to the call of the Twentieth century, to the hopes and ambitions of the present."

"We understand too well that men of power—not to include at present certain nations—would view with a greater or lesser satisfaction an internal rupture in the new republic. They would welcome as a move to the accomplishment of their own ends and designs a civil war between the provinces of the north and the south. Just as fifty years ago there was applause in secret (in certain quarters) over the terrible strife in the United States."

In Light of History.

"Had that war been successful from the south's standpoint and had two separate republics been established, is it not likely that perhaps half a dozen or more weak nations would eventually have been established? I believe that such would have been the result, and I further believe that with the one great nation divided politically and commercially, outsiders would have stepped in sooner or later and made of America their own. And I feel that we have just such enemies abroad as the American republic had and that at certain capitals the most welcome announcement that could be made would be that of a rebellion in China against the constituted authorities."

"However, foreign ill-wishers may as well understand first as last—perhaps better now—that the men who are at the forefront of Chinese affairs are a unit for the republic as established, and cannot be brought, individually or in factions, to oppose the onward march of the Chinese nation."

"I believe I am voicing the sentiment of a united and unanimous people when I warn troublemakers at home or abroad that the Chinese nation has joined the great family of republics to remain a member thereof at whatever cost or sacrifice."

SEARCHED EVERYONE FOR POSSIBLE ARMS

Strict Precautions Taken at the Snead Hearing.

Amarillo, Tex., Sept. 24.—In Judge Browning's courtroom twenty deputies stood guard during the habeas corpus hearing of John Beal Snead, who on Sept. 14 shot and killed here Al Boyce, who eloped with Snead's wife last winter. Every person entering the courtroom, man or woman, was searched for firearms. Snead appeared in the courtroom showing no emotion and still wearing a beard, which was the disguise he affected upon approaching Boyce.

Members of the Boyce family were only fifteen feet from him, but between them was a barrier of attorneys, deputies and friends. There was no outward show of comity. Snead continues to smoke his cigarettes. Witnesses described the actual killing and Snead's appearance at the time. The hearing will last for four or five days.

NATURE'S HINT

How the Absence of Clothes Levels All Social Ranks.

Vienna, Sept. 24.—The levelling influence of nakedness has had a serious and at the same time comic result in the Hungarian baths at Budapest. Count Karl Esterhazy, returning from a dip, was entering his dressing cabinet when he collided with Ladislav Racz, the thirty-sixth son of the so-called "Gypsy King."

Both of the men being undressed there was nothing to differentiate their social position. The count, being angry with Racz for bumping him, slapped his face. The gypsy thereupon seized the count and hurled him through a glass door, the nobleman being severely cut.

Racz was horrified when he learned of his victim's identity, and Count Esterhazy in turn was furious on hearing that his assailant was a gypsy, the count's social rank making it impossible for him to fight a duel with his bathing opponent.

Lake-To-The-Gulf Deep Waterways Association May Take a Stand in Politics.

G. O. P. PLANK IS THE BEST

Little Rock, Ark., Sept. 24.—Politicians as well as business men are interested in the seventh annual convention of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterways Association which began here today. It is considered possible because of the importance of the presidential campaign the convention will go on record through the indorsement of a candidate.

Friends of President Taft declare that he easily would have a majority, as the Republican platform has the best plank on a government policy of taking over the work of building and keeping the levees.

POLICE INQUIRY GROWING WARM

James Creelman Passes Lie On Witness Stand.

COUNSEL FOR THE COMMITTEE

Was Flatly Contradicted by the President of the Municipal Civil Service Commission, Who Also Takes Direct Issue With Waldo and Refers to Investigation as a "Petty Little Republican Ring Affair."

New York, Sept. 24.—On the witness stand at the aldermanic investigation, James Creelman, president of the municipal civil service commission, called Emory R. Buckner, counsel for the committee, a liar.

He referred to the investigation as a "petty little Republican political ring affair." And he contradicted under oath the sworn testimony of Commissioner Waldo, who had said he turned over to Mr. Creelman for investigation the papers in all cases of men whom he appointed to the police department after they had been rejected by Commissioner Cropsey. Mr. Cropsey had refused to make the appointments on the basis of reports by the police investigation bureau, which Commissioner Waldo abolished.

Commissioner Waldo had sworn that he turned over to Mr. Creelman the papers in all the disputed cases so that the civil service commission might make the proper investigations. Commissioner Creelman swore on the stand that Commissioner Waldo had taken to the offices of the civil service commission papers in, as he recalled, forty-seven cases and had selected out of that number some ten cases. These latter papers he had taken away with him, never turning them over to the civil service commission, the witness said. In a number of the remaining thirty-seven cases, Mr. Creelman stated, Commissioner Waldo had asked that the names be recertified, and this request had been complied with without investigation by the civil service commission.

In the case which remained two methods of disposition were employed. In a part of these cases the applicants were called before the commission and questioned by President Creelman. Each applicant was asked to explain false statements he had made in his affidavit and in practically every case he pleaded that he had not understood the question on the affidavit as to whether or not he had ever been arrested.

Mr. Creelman became incensed at a question and interpolated a statement in which he characterized as a lie the remark made by Mr. Buckner in the examination of Mayor Gaynor regarding an increase in the rates for burglary insurance in New York, saying that he declined to be examined further by a liar, referred to the lying reports of the police investigation bureau, called the aldermanic investigation a "petty little Republican ring political affair," and called Alderman Dowling a liar when the Republican alderman objected to such characterizations.

CALLS ON HILLES

President Taft Drops in on His Campaign Manager.

Washington, Sept. 24.—President Taft left here at 10 o'clock this morning for New York, where he will have a conference with Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the Republican national committee. Mr. Taft will arrive in New York about 3:30 o'clock and will go to the home of his brother, H. W. Taft, for dinner. In the evening he will attend the theater and will leave at 11:30 for Altoona, where he will address the meeting of the loyal war governors. He will leave Altoona tomorrow afternoon for Philadelphia, where his private car will be attached to the Colonial express bound for Boston. The president is due in Boston early Thursday morning.

CALLS FOR FACTS

Perkins Asks That Hilles's Testimony Be Demanded.

New York, Sept. 24.—George W. Perkins has written a letter in which he accuses Charles D. Hilles, the Taft campaign manager, of telling a "plain downright lie" in saying "Roosevelt spent millions of dollars of harvester trust money to gain the Republican nomination." In another letter he asked Senator Moses Clapp to call Mr. Hilles as a witness before the committee that is investigating campaign gifts, "in order that Mr. Hilles may be required to testify fully as to this charge that he makes."

Wilson Off For New England.

Sea Girt, N. J., Sept. 24.—Governor Woodrow Wilson yesterday afternoon went by automobile to Trenton to board his private car for Scranton, where he last night opened the Pennsylvania campaign. The nominees of the Pennsylvania state ticket were officially notified of their selection on the same occasion. The governor voted in the primaries at Princeton today and then started for New England for a three days' trip.

WILL REPUBLICANS INDORSE STRAUS?

Interesting Movement On Foot at Saratoga.

Saratoga, N. Y., Sept. 24.—In a maze are the Republicans over their candidate for governor. When former Speaker James W. Wadsworth, Jr., arrived he went into immediate consultation with his friends. It was particularly observed that he rather cottoned to President Koenig and Herbert Parsons of New York county. It is in that county it is expected that ex-Judge Job E. Hedges is to develop marked strength. All told, ex-Judge Hedges's friends declare that he is to start with 300 delegates, some of his strength coming from Kings and much additional support coming from upstate counties. Mr. Wadsworth announced when told of Judge Hedges's reported strength: "I certainly don't know how many delegates I have, but I am going to stay in this race to the end. I want that nomination."

While ex-Speaker Wadsworth is very popular with many of the Republican leaders and the delegates, they state that it would be exceedingly risky to nominate him. William A. Smith, the leader of Tioga county, is a strong advocate of Hedges. He said: "The farmers of western New York want Hedges."

The Orange county delegation has been engineering a movement to bring about the nomination for governor of Oscar S. Straus, who was nominated recently by the Progressive state convention. Quite a bunch of delegates are in hearty sympathy with the Straus movement.

Chairman Barnes and his friends stated that it would not be possible to nominate Mr. Straus. They did not believe that the delegates desired to indorse any act of the Bull Moose convention. William Berri continues his activities for a direct nominations plank in the platform, but Chairman Barnes and others will not accept the plank unless forced to do so.

HE ARRAIGNS BOSS SYSTEM

he cited that Bryan called Sullivan, the Illinois Democratic boss, a train robber, and Murphy, the New York boss, a thief. He said it was useless to enumerate the things Bryan had said about Tom Taggart, the Indiana boss.

Humbly the former senator, with sad mein and mournful looks, announced that he had tried to make it a rule of his life not to be bitter, but declared he could not refrain when he thought of the bosses in the Republican party. He admitted he disliked those in the Republican party more than those in the Democratic party.

Beveridge said Gov. Wilson made a little sport toward making laws against the "invisible government" in New Jersey, and that before he had finished, he found himself bound and gagged.

"If mighty Cleveland could not control the little bosses in his party in his day, how can weak Wilson expect to control the mighty bosses in his party today?" was the way the candidate put the question.

Another admission of the former senator: He said they always had trouble getting along with him in the senate, and when he came home, he found the Republican bosses had captured the Republican party leadership and made a mess of everything. He said he found graft in the State government.

He charged that the system of taxation for roads in Indiana is all wrong, and that the bosses manage to get the money some way or other. When he gets to be governor, he said he would fix all that up.

He lay the fact that the school books in Indiana are changed with the ever-changing times, to the door of the bi-partisan bosses. He said there was a school book trust, which, also, would be routed, when he got to be governor.

He said the public service corporations in Indiana had a combination to defraud the people and that there should be a public utilities commission. He promised legislation in that regard, too.

Beveridge asserted a vote for Durbin is a vote for the Republican machine and that a vote for Ralston is a vote for Tom Taggart's machine. He recalled that he referred recently to Sam Ralston as Tom Taggart's candidate and that Mr. Ralston got rather ruffled about it. Beveridge said that Ralston rather denied that he is Taggart's candidate.

He quoted from the Indianapolis News' news column and editorial, showing the News had presented Mr. Ralston as a candidate of Taggart's machine immediately after he was nominated in the State convention. He added the comment that the News is so violently against Roosevelt that it would swallow Ralston, Taggart machine and all.

Beveridge presented the initiative, referendum and recall as a cure for most every evil. He said they would do away with lobbyists and bosses.

"Every boss, legislator and corrupt legislator, and every 'bad' trust is against us," continued Mr. Beveridge, "because they know if our ticket is elected the boss system will go."

Beveridge said the Bull Moosers intended to destroy rotten methods of building tariff laws and to make a tariff law that will give the laborer a legitimate wage.

Beveridge advocated the minimum wage law for women, child labor legislation, a workmen's compensation act and recalled the marvelous deeds of Roosevelt while he was president. He characterized the act of Roosevelt in enabing the Russians and the Japs to stop fighting—and said they did at his mandate—the greatest act of any man at any given time in the world.

NEWCASTLE IS COMING SUNDAY

Special Train Will Bring Maxwells
and 300 Fans For Game Here With Locals.

ONE BIG CONTEST OF THE YEAR

State League Winners Will be Given

Hard Battle by Rushville—
Second of Series.

The attraction at the South Main street grounds Sunday will be the Maxwell team of Newcastle, winners of the Indiana State League pennant. The news that Newcastle would play the locals on the home lot was greeted with enthusiasm by the fans here.

Following the original schedule it was Newcastle's time to come here and as the famous Maxwell team has never played here the fans and rooters were anxious for the game.

Rushville and Newcastle have played in tough luck for the last two Sundays, rain keeping the two teams apart. It was only after considerable talk that Manager Maibaugh was able to convince Dal Williams that the team should play here and the arrangement meets with the entire satisfaction of the fans.

Newcastle will come to Rushville on a special train over the Big Four. Stops will be made at Knightstown and Carthage and a number from these towns will pay a visit here. It will be one of the big games of the year for Rushville and as the season is nearing an end the largest crowd ever at the park is expected. At least 300 fans from the Rose City will accompany the Maxwells.

Rushville supporters are anxious for a victory over Newcastle and Manager Maibaugh desires to cop the contest. The game should be a battle from start to finish. The locals' lineup will be changed but little and will be announced later in the week. The extra seats at the ball park are still in place and accommodations for the large crowd have been made.

Watson Can Explain About Campaign
Contribution, Ludlow Writes.

Louis Ludlow, Washington correspondent of the Indianapolis Star, contributes a story today which is in effect that James E. Watson was intrusted with a $25,000 contribution in 1908 to further the interests of Charles W. Fairbanks who was a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

It is said that Mr. Watson has told several persons of this contribution and that he will be able to explain all the details of how the money was raised and how it was disbursed, when called to the witness stand. Ludlow writes. For the present the alleged source of this lump contribution is withheld from publication. The investigation may take Mr. Watson out of the campaign a few days, Ludlow says.
